Now Over Attention.

NEW YORK, April 19.—(AP)— reporting a "vague confession" from Missa Roos, 30, Interior McDermott charged the wayward booking agent today homicide in the hammer slay-ing of Julia Nussbaum, pretty club musician.

Less than 24 hours after another prisoner stumbled over Miss Nussbaum's battered form in a d-proof rehearsal studio off Square, the inspector announced his prisoner had admitted altercation with the talented musicist, but declared he "didn't remember hitting her—I was drunk."

Strangled From Wife.
Cured by the unsolved death of Veronica Gedon, the beautiful model, her mother, and a father in their home on Easter day morning, police had pushed search for the latest killer.
Miss, estranged from his wife,
found at the Mountaineer, home of his father-in-law, today. Still in a drunken mood, he was hurried back to New York for questioning.

Miss, hatless, handcuffed and veiled, formally was booked at a police station upon charge of homicide.
Jealousy and a dispute over attention of Miss Nussbaum, who used the professional name of Tania Lee Lova, the police inspector said, were causes of quarrel climaxed when the 25-year-old entertainer was fatally slain with a hammer.

Ross' Story.
Miss' story as quoted by Inspector McDermott, was that she remember going into the room and she was there. We had some talks. We had been arguing for several days because I wanted to back to my wife and she didn't let me to.

LOYALISTS DEFY 27-NATION PATROL OF SPANISH COAST

Government Orders Ships and Planes To Protect Any Steamer Asking Protection, Flying Flag.

VALENCIA, April 20.—(Tuesday)—(AP)—The Spanish Loyalist government today defied the international patrol of Spain which went into effect at midnight. The 27-nation land and sea patrol is designed to prevent foreign assistance to either side in the civil war and thus prevent spread of the conflict to Europe.

The ministry of marine and air ordered the government fleet and air force to protect all ships flying the Spanish flag and those of other countries asking protection in Spanish waters.

Such protection, it announced, particularly would be applied to ports on the Mediterranean coast where German and Italian ships were assigned for patrol. Roughly, warships of Germany and Italy were assigned to the government-held coasts of Spain.

"If such protection requires sacrifice, it will be made without hesitation," the ministry announced.
"Contrary to Law."
Charging that the international patrol was "unjust and contrary to international law, the ministry declared it virtually was a blockade of Spanish ports.

It reminded the government fleet and air force the international scheme did not affect ships

COUNCIL RESTORES PARTIAL CONTROL TO GRADY BOARD

Amendments Are Passed by Final Vote of 11 to 3
After Earlier Defeat and Opposition From Couch.

Partial power was restored to the board of trustees of Grady hospital yesterday by city council but the amendments to curtail the supreme authority of Superintendent
J. B. Franklin almost failed as Councilman J. Allen Couch led a move for a public hearing on the matter.

Alderman I. Gloer Hailey and Councilman John A. White introduced the amendments to the drastic ordinance passed at the last council session which set Superintendent Franklin up as the executive and administrative authority of Grady and stripped the citizens' board of trustees of practically all jurisdiction.

Amendments adopted yesterday by a final vote of 11 to 4 returned to the board the power of selecting the staff of the city charitable institution and provided for the board to pass upon appeals of inmates who might be discharged by the superintendent.

Return Board to Power.
"These amendments gave back to the board the right to form the policies of the hospital," Alderman Hailey asserted.

"They only restore a part of the power that should be vested in the citizens' board," said Councilman J. Frank Beck, council's representative on the board.

The amendments had a narrow escape from defeat following Couch's effort to refer the paper to the ordinance and charter revision commission for a public hearing. This was voted down 6 to 5 but a few minutes later the amendments failed to get the second reading which is necessary before final passage. Six members

HOWELL ELECTED
DIRECTOR OF A. P.

Begin 42d Day of Fast at "Behest of Lord"

Jackson Whitlow, of Stoop Oak, Tenn., is shown refusing food for the 41st consecutive day yesterday in what he explains is a fast at the "behest of God." "I'll continue to fast until I do hear from Him," Whitlow told his wife, also shown above, shortly before he prayed that the "Lord will let me end this fast." The mountaineer has lost 29 pounds during the 41 days he has abstained from food. Story in page 2.

Oshawa Strikers Reject Pact Approved by UAWA, G. M.

Organizer Lauds Men, Although He Agreed to Settlement.

OSHAWA, Ontario, April 19.— (AP)—General Motors strikers tonight rejected a peace proposal previously approved by the company and the United Automobile Workers of America.

The rejection was unanimous.
"You were being duped, you're being fooled, you're being hoodwinked," Alex Hall, dapper little mayor of Oshawa, shouted at the strikers at an uproarious mass meeting after they had refused a pay raise and cut in working hours if only they gave up their demand for union recognition.

"Sooner or later you're going to know I'm right and I'm going to help you then," the mayor added, tears in his eyes and his voice quavering.

Hugh Thompson, UAWA organizer in charge of the strike, congratulated the men for holding out.

"You still are solid with one thing in mind—to get the things you want out after—and as long as you keep that spirit nothing can beat you," he said.
"This strike will only be settled

MAYOR PROMISES PAY RESTORATION TO CITY WORKERS

Five Per Cent Return To Become Effective May 1 in Lower Brackets and on June 1 in Higher.

Five per cent pay restorations to lower bracket non-school city employees on May 1 and the same amount to those in higher brackets
July 1 was promised by Mayor Hartsfield yesterday as a determined battle to make full restoration to all June 1 took place on council floor.

The mayor, in making a plea to release $180,000 immediately for relief, declared revenue from tax increases will not net more than $1,046,000, which is more than $200,000 under the total previously anticipated.

Alderman I. Gloer Hailey and Alderman Robert Carpenter called for full restoration as agreed upon for June 1 at a meeting held before the revenue raising bills were passed by the legislature. Carpenter, declaring he would not vote for relief allocations until the budget commission set up the total amount of money expected and made it available for salary restoration; later joined Hailey and Alderman Bridges in holding up the relief money until the next meeting of council.

Compromise Offered.
As a compromise, Hartsfield proposed restoring the basic pay of workers making $100 a month or less as of May 1, promising to call the budget commission, the finance committee, and council into session to effect this restoration before the end of the month.
He proposed restoring 5 per cent of the 10 per cent pay cut under which employees making $100 or more are working. He said the lower salary restoration would cost the city $24,000 for the remainder of the year, and $67,000 for those in the higher brackets, a total of $91,000.

ALDERMEN BLOCK FUND FOR RELIEF

Council Only Votes To Allot $20,000 Monthly Before Tieup by Board.

Release of city relief funds was again blocked temporarily yesterday by a tie vote in the aldermanic board.

After council only had voted to allocate $180,000 to relief at the rate of $20,000 a month, Alderman I. Gloer Hailey, Robert Carpenter and G. Dan Bridges voted "no" and blocked release of April funds until the next session of council.

STATE ASKS BIDS FOR $600,000 JOBS ON GEORGIA ROADS

Concrete Laying To Begin Within 60 Days on Marietta Highway, Says Board Chairman Miller.

The state highway board, continuing its effort to speed up road and bridge construction, yesterday issued a call for bids on about $600,000 worth of paving, grading and bridge projects which will be received on May 7.

At the same time, Chairman W.
L. Miller announced that the laying of concrete on the new Atlanta-Marietta highway would be started within 60 days and that the highway board has "high hopes" of completing the new route this summer, in addition to the widening of the present road to Marietta, via Smyrna.

The highway department already has expended nearly $500,- 000 in grading the new road and is expected to spend a similar amount in paving it. No estimate has been made in the cost of widening the present road, which is paving mostly with asphalt.

To Resurface Highway.
Chairman Miller said that after some study the highway board has decided not to begin immediately on the widening of the Atlanta-Griffin highway but has agreed to begin immediately on the resurfacing of the present road, which is badly in need of repair. The board said the resurfacing work would

Mystery War Craft Hover Off Norway

OSLO, Norway, April 19.—(AP)— Foreign airplanes, warships and submarines reported hovering mysteriously about the Scandinavian countries brought a war scare to Oslo tonight.

Officials professed alarm over the frequently recurring reports, and General Carl Erichsen, chief of Norway's defense in the north, urged the government to speed up defense measures.

Frank Dillon Hurried to Atlanta To Assume Charge of Convention of Georgia Federation Opening Here Tomorrow

NANCE ATTACKED AS CIO ORGANIZER

Armed with authority to rip the Georgia Federation of Labor apart, Frank Dillon, national labor organizer, will arrive in Atlanta early today to put in motion President William Green's latest order that Dillon take over the state federation convention tomorrow or set up a new convention in another building.

Green himself made the announcement in Washington, following a session yesterday of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor.

Dillon, general organizer for AFL, will seek to bar all delegates from the Georgia convention who may be identified with unions recognized as being affiliates of the Committee for Industrial Organization and to take from the determined hands of A. Steve Nance the scepter of the Georgia presidency.

Should Nance command a majority of delegates' votes, a "rump" convention of "faithful AFL delegates" will be held, Green said.
"Frank Dillon, one of our general organizers, has been instructed by the executive council to take charge of the Georgia Federation of Labor convention," said Green,
"and then use his own judgment as to how to proceed."

"If Nance is seated by the convention, faithful AFL delegates will hold another meeting in a separate building and reorganize.
Nance cannot serve two masters."
Nance, who has refused consistently to discuss the situation since his statement two weeks ago announcing his determination to hold to his post, last night smilingly declined comment on the news from Washington.

No Official Notification.
"I have had no official notification," he said. "I know nothing about it except what newspapermen have told me. I do not wish to comment before knowing more about it."
If he follows tactics he has employed since Green first demanded his resignation, however, Nance will not remain idle. Though talking no open hand himself in organizing the convention, his friends have been actively at work.

O. E. Petry, secretary-treasurer of GFL, said last night the matter of Dillon's mission in Georgia would be presented to the state executive council this morning, but declined to say anything about Green's action except to style the AFL chief's charges against Nance as a "tortured conception of loyalty."

Completes His Message.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(AP)— Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, said after a White House conference tonight that President Roosevelt would ask congress for $1,500,000,000 for relief in the year beginning next July 1.

Roosevelt finished drafting his message tonight and will transmit it to congress tomorrow. Robinson added the conferees tonight agreed to bend every effort to limit expenditures and appropriations to close the gap between income and outgo.

Son of Clark Howell Sr.
Dies After Operation;
Funeral Rites Today.

Julian Erwin Howell, son of the late Clark Howell Sr., editor and president of The Constitution, died early yesterday morning, following an operation.

Mr. Howell, who was 29, was educated in the public schools of Atlanta, later attending Culver Military Academy and the Virginia Military Institute.

'Othello' Opens Coronation Season; Jewelled Tiaras Sparkle at Opera

LONDON, April 19.—(AP)—Jewelled tiaras sparkled tonight as societies descended proudly upon Covent Garden market for the opening of the coronation season at the Royal Opera House.

tance from the opera house and hurried on foot through traffic in order not to miss the opening strains of Verdi's "Othello." They recalled that Sir Thomas Beech-am, director, last year ordered dozens locked as the overture began.

Giovanni Martinelli appeared in the title role of the inaugural coronation opera. It was his first appearance at Covent Garden since 1914, when he opened the season with Melba in "La Boheme" and later appeared twice in the same opera before the late King George V. Queen Mary and other members of European royalty.

A brilliant audience of 2,000 persons attended the opening and gave repeated ovations to Martin-elli before the curtain finally was rung down. Princesses Helena Victoria and Marie Louise, granddaughters of Queen Victoria, were in the royal box.

A fashion feature was the return of gay colors in the dresses of the women who last year were attired more soberly because of court mourning for King George V.

The auditorium scintillated with jewels as tiaras replaced flowers.
A striking figure among the spectators was the Sultana of Johore, who wore an inch-square sapphire in her tiara.

FAT-CATTLE SHOW, WITH 500 ENTRIES, WILL START TODAY

Winners of Championships To Be Announced at Dinner Planned Tonight.

Several hundred 4-H Club boys and adult farmers, their prize cattle safely quartered, roamed the city's streets last night impatiently awaiting the opening of the second annual Atlanta fat beef cattle show and sale this morning.

Each was confident that among their entries there was at least one winner, but each was anxiously awaiting the judges' announcements tonight.

Both the show and sale will be held today and tomorrow at the Jones-Neuhoff barns, 994 Marietta street, N. W. The annual beef show is under the sponsorship of the livestock committee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

Judging Today. Judges will spend today inspecting each of the 500 entries and tonight will announce the grand and reserve champions and other prize winners. Sponsors of the show will entertain the 4-H Club boys at a dinner at 6:30 o'clock tonight at the Ansley hotel. Among other guests at the dinner will be members of the livestock committees and regional associations of Chambers of Commerce at Augusta, Albany, Athens, Columbus, Macon and Savannah.

The judges for the show are L.

Mountaineer Begins 42d Day of Fasting

STOOPING OAK, Tenn., April 19.—(P)—Jackson Whitlow, 45-year-old mountaineer, spent most of today in praying that "the Lord let me end my fast." This was the 42d day Whitlow says he has gone without food.

Until he "hears from the Lord," Whitlow said he intended to spend practically all of his time "praying and reading the Bible."

He declared he started his fast "at a call from the Lord" and would continue it until he had a call to eat.

Whitlow says he now weighs about 107 pounds. He weighed 136 when he started going without food.

I. Case, extension animal husbandman, State College of North Carolina; J. R. Hawkins, extension animal husbandman, Clemson College, Clemson, S. C.; R. S. Sugg, extension animal husbandman, Auburn, Ala.

Cash prizes will be awarded winners in each of the classes and loving cups will be given winners of the grand and reserve champions.

Meat Grading. Dr. L. B. Burk, agricultural economist, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, will conduct a meat grading demonstration at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. In making the demonstration, several different grades of beef are compared with live animals and Dr. Burk will explain the various characteristics of the different qualities.

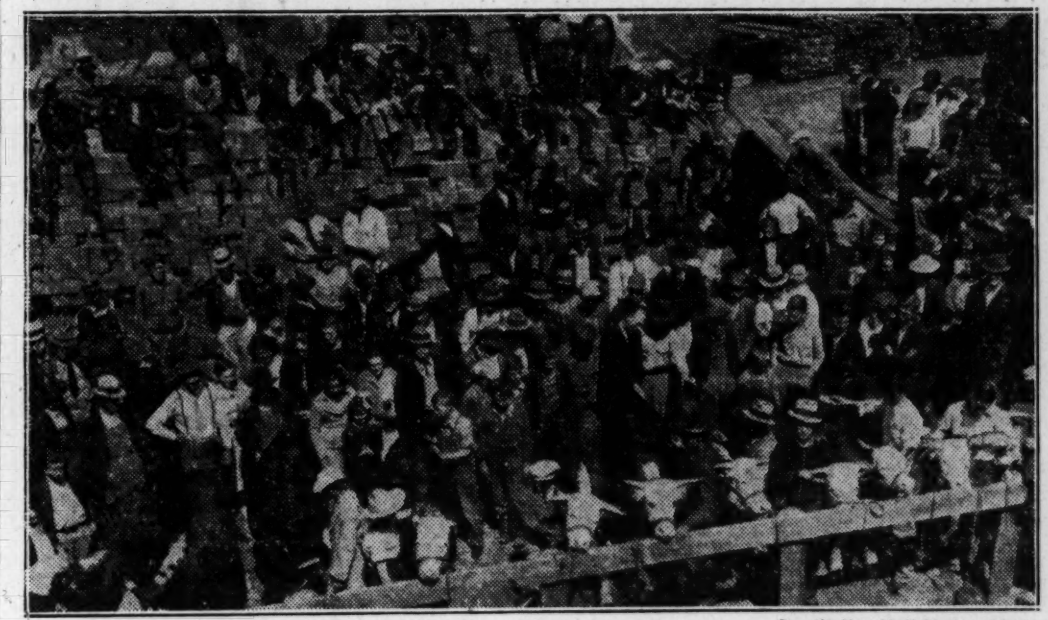

The purpose of the fat cattle show was announced by T. C. Law, chairman of the livestock committee, as being "to hold an annual fat beef cattle show and sale which will be emblematic of the progress made in the raising of beef cattle in the northern part of Georgia and to carry it on as a civic program, nonpolitical, non-profit and nonpartisan in character, from the standpoint of the sponsor, but as a means of stimulating the development and progress of the livestock industry for the benefit of the agricultural area served and for profit to the farmers and cattlemen who do now or may later include the breeding and raising of livestock in their farm program."

Auction of the prize-winning cattle will begin at 11 o'clock tomorrow.

SULLEN GANGSTERS DENY SLAYING AGENT

Pair Held Without Bail Face Murder Indictment by Special Jury.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., April 19.—(P)—Two young New York gangsters muttered pleas of innocence to murder charges today as Attorney General Cummings moved to hasten their trial for killing Federal Agent Kimberly W. Baker in a Topeka (Kan.) gunfight.

"I find you both probably guilty of the offense charged," United States Commissioner Patrick W. Crocker told the two, Robert Suhay and Albert Power, in formal court language as he held them without bail.

United States Attorney S. S. Alexander said he would demand the death penalty for both.

Before the brief arraignment had been completed the attorney general in Washington said he had instructed Alexander to request the impounding at Topeka of a special grand jury to hear the case. The regular grand jury does not meet until June.

Suhay and Power, asserted principals in an $18,000 robbery of a Katonah (N. Y.) bank, were captured by a county sheriff in Nebraska after they had blasted their way through a government agent trap in the Topeka postoffice Friday. Baker was fatally shot as the men fled.

CLASS AT UNIVERSITY TO SEE MARKETS HERE

Members of the marketing agriculture products' class of the University of Georgia will visit Atlanta on Thursday for a one-day inspection tour of the city's municipal and farmers' markets.

The students will inspect the Municipal Market, the Georgia State Farmers' Market and the Sears' Farmers' Market.

Daily routine essential for carrying out the work of operating a large market will be outlined to the group.

B. C. MEGEE IS KILLED IN CRASH IN FLORIDA

B. C. Meghee, 50, operator of a grocery store at Gordon and Highway roads, was killed early yesterday morning in an automobile crash near Bolintown, Fla.

Details of the accident were not available. Meghee is survived by his wife; two sons, S. E. and C. Barfield Meghee; his father, C. W. Meghee; two brothers, H. C. and C. W. Meghee Jr., and three sisters, Mrs. M. W. Anderson, Mrs. J. S. Watson and Miss Blanche Meghee.

Funeral plans will be announced by Awtry & Lowndes.

Wedding of Girl, 10, May Be Contested

EPPELSON, Tenn., April 19.—(UP)—Attorney General Witt said tonight the marriage of Geneva Blevins, 10, to Homer Peel, 34, was in violation of the state's new marriage law, adding he "probably will prosecute responsible persons."

The 10-year-old girl, an adopted orphan, living with Peel's parents, is small for her age and barely reaches to the waist of her lanky mountaineer husband.

She gave her age as 18 when they were married March 28. Age limit under Tennessee's new "child marriage laws" is 18.

Mrs. Sarah Hamby, grandmother of the bride, said the girl was 12.

Geneva tonight was unconcerned about threats of legal action and appeared happy with her husband in the Peel home where they are living.

LOWER TEMPERATURE IS EXPECTED TODAY

Partly cloudy is the weather word for Atlanta today, according to the prediction at the Candler airport weather office, issued last night.

Temperatures are due to range today between 60 and 80 degrees. The range yesterday was between 85 and 60 degrees. The mercury is running from eight to ten degrees above normal, it was said, but is expected to resume its normal trend within the next few days.

Weather maps indicated scattered showers tomorrow, however.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS TAKES LIFE OF CHILD

JACKSON, Miss., April 19.—(P)—Death of one child and illness of another from infantile paralysis in Rankin county led to precautionary measures there today upon advice of the state board of health.

All pupils, teachers and bus drivers of the Pearl consolidated school, where the two victims were students, were asked to take the nose spray, Dr. H. C. Ricks, state director of communicable disease control, said.

Pearl Marie Sumrall, seven, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Sumrall, died Saturday night of paralysis of the diaphragm, resulting from a few days' illness of poliomyelitis. The other child, living near by, was said to be recovering.

LEWIS IS DESCRIBED AS LONG SUCCESSOR

Osborn Pleads for Greater Degree of Sane Social Justice.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., April 19.—(P)—Chase S. Osborn, former governor of Michigan, tonight described John L. Lewis as Huey Long's successor as the "champion of the social discontents" and said the only way to defeat him is to give the masses a greater degree of sane social justice than he offers.

Osborn, how a part-time Georgian, spoke at a meeting of the Georgia Beta Chapter of Pi Gamma Mu, national social honor society at the Georgia State College for Women.

He compared Lewis to historical Spartacus who roused Thracians against the conquest of Rome.

"The great difference between the situation in America and that in ancient Rome," he said, "is that Rome exploited aliens and America permits the exploitation of its own people."

"The public schools and some of our colleges and other influences have taught the masses just enough to make them discontented. They think that capital is wrong and that those who labor are in a measure enslaved. All they think they need is a leader."

"Huey Long appeared above the

Hit-Run Trolley Kills Playing Boy

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 19.—(P)—Police tonight sought to identify a trolley car and motorman after the car struck and killed a seven-year-old boy in the downtown section, failed to stop, according to city Police Superintendent.

The boy, Walter Hazard, 11 less than an hour after he struck, while playing Indian cowboy with other children, North Main street.

Why "BC" Relieves Headache and Neuralgia So Quickly

Many people wonder what there is about the "BC" formula that enables it to relieve headaches, neuralgia and similar pains of an inorganic character so quickly. The answer is simple. The "BC" formula is a special combination of proved, quick-acting ingredients of the type many physicians commonly prescribe, none of which are opium or any of its derivatives. These ingredients are carefully checked, and the manufacture of all "BC" is under the direct supervision of a registered pharmacist. Try "BC" the next time you want quick and comforting relief. You'll find it effective for the relief of headache, neuralgia, muscular aches; for pain and comfort due to simple nervousness and headache and backache due to functional disturbances. YOUTH FLORIDANS ARE NOT SATISFIED BY CANAL REPORTS Feel Water Supply Endangered, House Committee Is Told.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(AP) MacDonald, president of the Florida Water Conservation League, told the house rivers and harbors committee today, favorably reports on the Florida ship canal had been insufficient to remove his organization's fear the waterway would damage the underground water supply.

MacDonald said he and many other south Florida growers were willing to accept the word of General Markham, chief of engineers, and geologists employed by the War Department, that the cut across northern Florida would not endanger the state's water reservoir.

Meanwhile, Representative Belmont, Democrat, New York, sought support for a plan to send the committee's omnibus river and harbor authorization bill to the house without a reference to the Florida canal.

Belmont said he would offer tomorrow a motion to report the omnibus bill immediately.

Adoption would not prevent the committee's approving the canal as a separate measure.

BARBER IS TRIED IN CHILD SLAYING

State Demands First-Degree Murder Verdict in Sex Crime.

NEW YORK, April 19.—(AP) State demanded a first degree murder conviction today for Salvatore Ossi, 27-year-old barber, whose counsel admits he beat to death little Einar Sporer, 9, a month ago in a sex crime.

District Attorney Geoghan said he would show Ossi "deliberate" killed the child, knowing the "nature and quality of his act."

The first witness, Dr. Emanuel Tenen, deputy chief medical examiner, testified the 65-pound child died of three skull fractures that she was criminally assaulted at about the time of her death.

MOUNTAINS COMBED FOR FARMER'S KILLER

OAKLAND, Md., April 19.—(AP) While guards watched over two threatened persons, police searched today for a mountaineer described by State Police Corporal Harris as the killer of a farmer in the mountainous area near the town.

Thirty policemen searched for the man, Clyde Friend, 30, and tortured he sighted him twice.

Constable Bittinger was placed guard at the home of Mrs. Harris. Friend, Clyde's mother, and Constable Shroyer was placed at the home of Wayne Hook. Both, he said, had been threatened.

Hook is the son of Quinter Hook, a well-to-do, one-armed farmer of Endsfield who yesterday was killed by a high-powered rifle as he had gone to a field to tend his cows.

Cain Leaves Life of Berlin Ease For Spot of Work on Havre Ship

Nothing Like Manual Labor for Good Health, Hiker Finds While Washing Pans in Third-Class Galley.

By ARTHUR CAIN.

Having frowned disdainfully upon work and left Hamburg in high dudgeon, we made a return trip to Berlin. Once again hanging precariously on the blinds of a southbound express, we sped along to catch the last days of the 1936 Olympic games. It occurred to us there should be a "train riding" event inaugurated in the 1940 convention of the world's best athletes. Cain has already qualified.

We were delighted to hear that another Georgian, Forrest Townes, was in Berlin at the time. Although we had not had the pleasure of meeting the jumping gentleman he would doubtless be glad to let me hear things of the old red clay hills of home. We made inquiries concerning Mr. Townes' whereabouts as soon as we dropped out of the fast-moving train and made our way into the center of town.

Unfortunately, we were only in time for the last two days of the games. Jesse Owens had already set the laddies on their heels and the world in general had been convinced America did turn out the best athletes if not the most admirable tourists. But the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. Townes, was not to be found.

I daresay the various hotel proprietors whom I accosted looked upon the gentle Cain as a celebrity seeker (heaven forbid) or else as one of the many panhandlers who overran the big city during the festivities. We were neither, merely wishing a spot of conversation with the fellow Cracker, but it was to no avail. We contented ourselves by telling anyone who would listen of the dogwood and peach trees and lovely ladies who graced the old home town. Cain was, in fact, a self-appointed missionary for the Chamber of Commerce the whole trip through.

Most Beautiful Month.
As the tumult and shouting died and the warriors of the nations departed Germany again became the quiet, peaceful place of which Cain had become so fond during his first days there. River Spree rolled lazily through the tranquil city—Grunewald, the great forest, was a fairland of natural wonder—lime and chestnut trees swayed softly in the warm winds sweeping up from southern France. It was August now, the most beautiful month in which to visit Germany.

Cain was aware it was going to be very difficult to get away from these comfortable surroundings. The first pang of remorse for declining that job in Hamburg began to bother us. By now we would probably be in London or Paris and he well on our way towards reaching the far east. We stirred uneasily in our couch on the banks of River Spree. There was always something to annoy us! No sooner did we accustom ourselves to one place than that wretched sense of duty of ours appeared like an evil genii and produced Cain aggravatingly in the shapely ribs.

Well, when you gotta go you gotta go, so Cain assembled the bones and prepared to get a flying start to Hamburg. No jobs would be refused this time. If an engineer wished Cain to boil himself alive in the fire room Cain would be accommodating. Anything to snap out of the lethargy into which we had been immersed for the last month or two. Cain flexed what was left of the mighty biceps tentatively. No response. We hurried to a full length mirror and peered at Cain anxiously. "Gosh! Can this be Cain?"

Undesired Break.
We hastily grabbed still another train on the fly, went to Hamburg and demanded work at once. And this time, although we didn't deserve the break, we got the job, "turned to" right away and finally sailed up the Elbe to the North Sea.

Aboard our new craft we realized painfully we would have been better off had we accepted the wiper's job on that other ship.

While the fire-room was a tortuous place to work, it was practically a paradise compared to our present locale. We were assigned to wash pots in the third class galley. And the first couple of days nearly killed us.

At 5 a. m. we carried the stores. Ten pans of fish which weighed a scant 90 pounds each, cases of grapefruit and oranges, sacks of potatoes and sugar, all must be taken from the store-room on C deck and transported up three flights of ladderway, across the aft deck and down again two more flights of stairs. And when this was done, the real work of the day began with a multitude of the hottest, greasiest, most odorous pots and pans on the face of the earth. Cain, when he was able to talk at all, shocked even the seamen with his opinions of food, work, and whoever put this utterly preposterous notion of hitchhiking around the world in his head.

It's surprising how much the human body will take when it has to. Cain sweat and cursed and was certain if he lived through this nothing would kill him. But in the end we pulled into Le Havre none the worse for the experience and, in fact, felt better than we had in months. There's nothing like a spot of the good old manual labor to get you straightened out when the bones begin to ache.

DEBRIS WHERE 9 DIED IS SEARCHED FOR CLUE

MUSKEGO, Wis., April 19.—

(AP)—A six-man coroner's jury poked through debris today in an effort to learn what touched off an explosion that killed a mother and eight of ten of her children. The ninth body was recovered today in the wreckage of the two-story frame farmhouse, blown to bits last night while the John Waszak family sat in a living room listening to the radio.

The body, that of 21-2-year-old Raymond, was found near the spot where a quantity of pyrocol, a type of dynamite, was stored in the cellar.

AAA MARKETING ITEM RE-ENACTED BY HOUSE

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(AP)—

The house passed today and sent to the senate a bill re-enacting the marketing provisions of the old agricultural adjustment act which the supreme court invalidated last year.

Chairman Jones, Democrat, Texas, explained there was some question as to whether the marketing provisions fell with the AAA decision. Re-enactment, he said, would settle this point.

Under the marketing provisions, the secretary of agriculture is empowered to set up programs designed to bring about a more orderly marketing of farm commodities.

GROCERY EMPLOYEES GET SHORTER HOURS

Council Votes Ordinance Backed by Atlanta Food Dealers' Association.

Shorter working hours for grocery store employees was voted by council yesterday in an ordinance adopted upon the request of the Atlanta Food Dealers' Association.

The new ordinance sets forth the following work schedule for grocery employees, beginning May 1: Wednesday, 7 a. m. to 1 p. m.; Saturdays, 7 a. m. to 3 p. m.; and from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays.

Food stores will close Wednesday afternoons under the plan offered by the legislation committee of the Food Dealers' Association and employees will have more time off for leisure.

T. L. Lyle, president of the association; R. I. Barge, E. L. Brooks, John Powell and S. A. Camp, members of the committee, conferred with Mayor Hartsfield yesterday morning, declaring that independent and chain grocery and food stores alike had agreed upon the new schedule of hours. They were promised the co-operation of the city administration.

Alderman I. Glover Halley, mayor pro tem, introduced the ordinance.

"Even with this change of hours," Camp, who was chairman of the committee, said, "grocery clerks will still work longer hours than anybody else. However, the service to be rendered the public will not be affected."

Physicians Honor 3 Atlanta Doctors

Three Atlantans were among physicians elected yesterday by the American College of Physicians, at St. Louis, as fellows and associate members of the organization.

The fellows include Dr. Vernon Edwin Powell, and the associates, Dr. Cyrus Warren Strickler Jr., and Dr. Ebert Van Buren.

Associates are admitted to membership after being proposed by a fellow or master of the college and voted upon by the board of regents. Elevation to fellowship is made by the board after an associate has been deemed qualified and has submitted proof of his active medical work.

NEW STATE BUYER IN NORTH CAROLINA

Lewis Seeks Information on Purchasing System for State.

John C. Lewis, recently appointed state supervisor of purchases, and O. G. Glover, assistant, were in Raleigh, N. C., yesterday obtaining information to aid them in setting up a new Georgia purchasing system.

The new system, provided for in an act of the recent general assembly, calls for all purchases for the various state departments to be handled through a single board.

Proposals of the plan estimated a saving of as much as $1,000,000 annually to the state through consolidated purchases and standardized supplies.

Lewis and Glover planned to be in North Carolina three or four days.

CULTURAL CENTER PLANNED AT EMORY

Close Co-operation Between City and University Is Theme of Parley.

Emory University last night prepared to take the lead in a drive to establish Atlanta as the cultural and educational center of the south as officials urged a group of prominent Atlantans to mobilize the intelligence of the city with that of the university in a co-operative plan of development for the next 10 years.

Charles Howard Candler, president of the board of trustees, presided and acted as toastmaster at a dinner at the Capital City Club, and Robert C. Mizell, secretary of Emory, was the principal speaker.

Mizell outlined what he termed a dual objective of Dr. Warren H. Cox, president of the university, and the board of trustees.

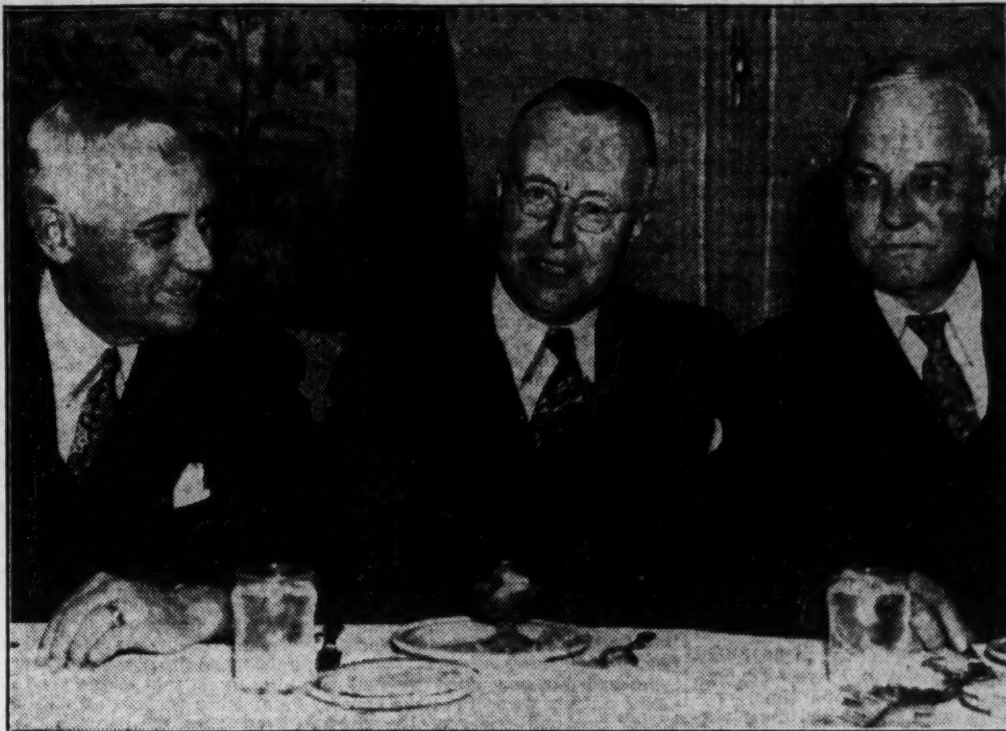

Educational Center Plan.
The first was that the time has come to make Atlanta an educational center of leadership and the second was that Atlantans should become interested in Emory and reciprocally that Emory should begin to take a broader and keener interest in Atlanta and "without leaving the campus come to town."

A projected discussion of making Atlanta the medical center of the south was alluded to only. Mizell in a portion of his address, said:

"In time Atlanta should become a great medical center. It is not quite ready yet, but the time is almost here."

63 Alumni on Faculty.
He did not amplify the statement. Mizell also pointed out that 63 former Emory men have now

Emory Sees Atlanta as Great Educational Center

been called back to the university as full time members of the faculty, adding that 287 former Emory graduates are connected with other institutions of learning throughout the world. A total of 99 of them are in colleges and universities of America, and nine are in foreign countries, he added. The remainder are in secondary schools.

In opening the speaking, Mr. Candler told the select audience, "Emory wants to share its dreams and ideals with you."

Dr. Cox invited his listeners to look to the future. He asserted that perhaps Emory has lived too close to itself, but that it has been constructing its foundation. He added the university is now ready to branch out and aid in making Atlanta the cultural and educational center of the southeast. He said Atlanta has a large responsibility for Emory.

Glenn Speaks.
Thomas K. Glenn, chairman of the executive committee of the board of trustees, called for the perpetuation of Emory through service from those now connected with the institution and those who should be interested in it.

Speakers indicated that various schools will be discussed at subsequent meetings to be called by the trustees and officers of the institution.

Mizell pointed out that Agnes

Scott and Emory already have a reciprocal agreement concerning libraries and other facilities of the two institutions, and that Emory, Georgia University and Mercer University have evolved a plan to operate their law schools at one of the institutions during the summer months.

He said the time has come for co-operation of educational institutions in making Atlanta the cultural and educational center of the entire south.

GREEN SENDS LABOR LEADER TO ATLANTA

Green's statement that "it Nance is seated" another meeting would be organized as meaning the AFL chief anticipates Nance's victory in the convention vote.

Goode and Ross both were in Washington yesterday, but Green said they did not participate in the council session.

Nance has been under Green's fire since he identified himself with three organizations affiliated with CIO and under suspension from AFL.

Nance staked his fortunes on the argument that at the Tampa convention of AFL last year Green issued a pronouncement declaring CIO officials "in status quo" until further notice. It has been advanced by Nance's faction in GFL ranks that this status quo order never was rescinded; that Green's demand for Nance's resignation on grounds of his CIO activities did not imply the order had been rescinded and that the promised

"further notice" never had been issued.

Claim Status Quo Rescinded.
Green's representatives told the Georgia federation's executive board Sunday a week ago that a letter over Green's signature, announcing the policy of AFL's executive council and calling on state federations, city central bodies and their officials to pledge their loyalty to AFL as against rival organizations, was notice that the status quo order was rescinded. They met the reply that the letter did not so state.

"Rescinding of the status quo order was clearly implied in this letter," said Ross and Goode.

Delegates to the Georgia convention began arriving last night, early comers including members of the executive board and of two conversion committees, all scheduled for preliminary meetings today. Registration was not expected to start until today. Convention headquarters will be at the Piedmont hotel.

Clement E. Sutton, Wilkes county member and administration floor leader of the Georgia house of representatives, and Frank Allen Constangy, former Atlanta, now living in Birmingham, have been announced as chief speakers.

Welcoming addresses will be given by Mayor William B. Hartsfield, for the city; Downing M. Groves, executive secretary to Governor Rivers, for the Governor and the state; J. A. Ragdsdale, chairman of the Fulton County Board of Commissioners, for the county; W. Eugene Harrington, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Dade Kelly, president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and J. A. Harper, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades.

A portrait of Jerome Jones, gift of the Atlanta federation and the state body will be unveiled at the Jones school at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon with William Van Houten presiding.

Following the unveiling a barbecue will be served at the Venetian Club. A banquet and dance are planned for Thursday night.

The shipments constitute about 75 per cent of all Spain's iron ore exports.

PRESIDENT TO ASK RELIEF CUT TODAY

850,000,000 in the current fiscal year.

The proposed appropriations would be about the same as the President suggested tentatively in his budget message last January. He said then that a year's budget could be balanced exclusive of debt retirement, if the expenditures did not exceed $1,537,000,000.

However, since that time, disappointing tax receipts have come in, complicating the picture.

Mayors Want More.
The sum to be requested is far less than that sought by the United States conference mayors and many state officials. They have urged the President recommend more than $2,000,000,000.

Immediately after tonight's conference, speculation flared in capital as to whether some senators might campaign for appropriations less than the President suggests.

With Robinson at the two-day conference with the President were Vice President Charles McNary, Speaker Bankhead, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, Budget Director Daniel W. Bell, Senator Hiram Bingham, and others.

Like a wise buyer, this motorist made the rounds of dealers in low-priced cars and got the real facts about comparative prices. And here they are: "based on 18 months terms in 168 representative cities the average difference in monthly payments between a Pontiac DeLuxe six 2-door sedan and the same model of the next lower-priced cars is only 15 cents a day. Naturally, that small extra sum was paid with pleasure and the result is another satisfied Pontiac owner, enjoying more satisfaction than a motor car ever brought before. America's finest low-priced car will suit you better, too. Prove it with a ride.

of countries outside the pact nor Spanish ships.

The orders warned all patrol ships could not be placed in the same category.

"Though we may have to pay tragically for the consequences of political errors committed by France and England," the ministry said, "we are sure of their intention to adhere to their word and of their eventual correction of policy."

"We cannot say the same of Italy and Germany."

Accuse Fascists.
"German and Italian warships protect—when they are not going so themselves—the transport of men and materials that their governments send to be used against us, practice constant espionage, launch planes which bombarded our coasts and, when they feel themselves safe, attack Loyalist boats as is evident by the torpedoing of the cruiser Miguel de Cervantes by an Italian submarine."

These alleged precedents, the ministry asserted, led the government to believe the participation of Italian and German ships in the international patrol would "serve as an ambush for similar or greater offenses."

MANY MADRILINOS KILLED IN SHELLING

MADRID, April 20.—(Tuesday) (AP)—Insurgents shelled the capital last night in the first night bombardment since New Year's eve after pumping explosives into the city for eight consecutive days.

The artillery attack, which began at 11:30 p. m. and lasted until midnight, claimed a number of victims.

During the eight days' shelling, 100 persons have been killed and more than twice that many wounded. Victims for the most part have been pedestrians struck down in the streets. The shells often penetrate buildings and explode inside.

The bombardment, directed against all sections of the city, has left no safe spots of refuge. The downtown district, however, has been most severely punished; theaters, hotels, restaurants and shops have been struck repeatedly.

The shells have found their mark on one downtown building 45 times.

The government pressed its offensive against Insurgents on the Teruel front 150 miles to the east. In the rich mine country of Cor-

MME. CHIANG DESCRIBES GENERAL'S RELEASE BY MUTINEERS

CAPTIVE FROM SIAN
CORNERED BY WIFE

Bribery Was Employed in Freeing Leader,
She Writes.

This is the third instalment of a remarkable document—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's story of his captivity in Sian. The first two instalments told of her determination to keep the Nanking military leaders from carrying out their plan to attack Sian and of her decision to fly to Sian to save her husband's life.

HANGHAI, April 19.—As General Chiang Kai-shek had already been in and out of Sian, I requested him to accompany me to Sian. The generalissimo needed an officer of his standing as representative.

General Chiang Kai-shek, who regarded him as one of his own, had been snatched from the field, made objections to his remaining there. At the airport that morning I pointed out to her that I was not asking him to do anything that I would not do myself, and I, being a woman, was much more at stake than he. He is a military man, I explained, and his life belongs to his country. You, as a wife of a military officer, should prove worthy of him by putting no obstacles in his way.

With tears streaming down her cheeks, she silently assented. Mme. Chiang drew her away as we entered the plane. People think me brave, but I know I am not. I am a woman, and I am not a woman's ability to place national interests above the safety of her husband.

Disaster Predicted.
Despite the predictions of disaster, which were freely forecast for me and my own knowledge of the character of the troops that controlled the city, I set off with calm determination, with my eyes wide open, but unafraid. No one could have better than I the risk I was running when the time came for me to step from my airplane into a region held by numerous troops.

The flight to Loyang was in the sunshine that had appeared a week, but the Loyang field, crowded with bombers fully loaded for action, did not look very reassuring to me. I spent the lunch hour talking with the officials in charge of the air force and the army. As I boarded the plane, I looked the pilot in the eye and told him to approach Sian till he was ordered to do so by the generalissimo.

Now I began to feel anxious and apprehensive. We were following the railway line through low-covered mountains; past the peaks of the famous Sacred mountain of Hwasan, which looked like great masses of sparkling ice, and finally over the opening valley leading to Sian.

"There's Lintung, where the generalissimo was captured," said Mr. Donald, pointing to a square walled city nestled under the white hills.

My thoughts flew fast and furiously. In a moment or so it seemed we were circling over Sian and the air field, but before the plane landed I made Mr. Donald promise, handing him a revolver, that if troops got out of control and seized me, he should without hesitation shoot me.

I had been pondering the attitude I should take when I came face to face with those responsible for the detention of my husband. I knew that everything depended upon my method of approach. I determined that, even if they were rude, I should not lose my temper but be as natural as I could.

Chang Embarrassed.
As the plane circles over the air field, no cars were visible. No people except a few guards were on the field, which showed that the telegrams announcing our departure had not been received. We therefore went back over the city to draw attention to the fact that we had arrived, and cars were soon at the landing place.

When the plane came to a standstill Han-chen (Chang Hsueh-liang) came on board, looking very tired, very embarrassed, and somewhat ashamed.

I greeted him as I always have done and, as we left the plane, asked him quite casually not to let any of his men search my baggage, as I disliked having my things messed up.

"Oh, madame, I would never dare do that," he very apologetically replied.

Just then Yang Hu-chen (pacification commissioner at Sian), an associate of Han-chen in the mutiny, came up. I shook hands with him as though I was just arriving on a casual visit. Yang was obviously very nervous, and just as obviously very relieved at my calm attitude.

The car journey into the city was not as strained as it might have been, and as we reached the house of Han-chen he asked me if I wanted to go immediately to see the generalissimo.

I told him that I would first have some tea, wishing to show him that I took him to be a gentleman and was quite prepared to place myself in their hands. I reflected at this juncture upon the fact that certain people in Nanking had warned me that if I got to Sian I would not be allowed even to see the generalissimo, but would be subjected to indignities and be held as a hostage. I must confess that, while I felt sure of Han-chen, I had some misgivings about others.

Greeted Her Husband.
The generalissimo had not yet been informed of my arrival and I decided, in order to avoid giving him undue anxiety, to keep that fact from him until I saw him myself. The compound of the bungalow where the generalissimo was detained was just a stone's throw from Han-chen's house and was strongly guarded, some of the guards having machine guns.

As I walked into my husband's room, he exclaimed: "Why have you come? You have walked into a tiger's lair." He shook his head sadly, and tears sprang to his eyes.

"I have come to see you," I said, trying to be as casual as I could. My husband was in bed, suffering from a wrenched back. He looked wan and ill. I promptly saw that I would have to nurse him to secure some comfort for him. As I saw him lying there injured and helpless, the shadow of his former self, with his hands, legs and feet cut by barbed wire and bruised by the rocks he clambered over when scrambling about the mountain, I felt surge through me an uncontrolable wave of repentment against those responsible for his plight.

"Although I urged you not to come in any circumstances to Sian," he said, "still I felt that I could not prevent it. I opened the Bible this morning and my eyes lit on the words, 'Jehovah will now do a new thing, and that is, he will make a woman protect a man.'"

He told me of his trials; of his determination not to agree to anything while under restraint; and he entreated me not to ask him to sign anything while under duress.

Generalissimo Reassured.
I told him that I considered the welfare of the country above his personal welfare, and that he need not have any fear that I would try to influence him to sign anything.

He said several times that he was ready to die for the good of the country. I pointed out that since his detention the whole of the people of China, even those who criticized his policies, were profoundly affected, and people throughout the whole world were praying for his release. Even the smallest school children were crying as though they had lost a father, and when it was reported that he had been assassinated many soldiers had committed suicide.

"Therefore," I urged, "you should not talk of sacrificing your life for the good of the country. To save the country there is more reason than ever for you to live. Be comforted, for God is with us. I am here to share your fate and to die with you, if God so wills it, and, if He wills it otherwise, to live and work with you for the sake of the nation."

I explained that I sensed that the people who were detaining him were conscious of their wrong doing, and, if rightly handled, adjustment could be quickly made. Meanwhile we should not lose our tempers, but should be patient.

I noticed that his recital of what he had suffered on the morning of December 12 upset him emotionally and agitated his mind. To calm him I opened the Psalms and read to him until he drifted off to quiet sleep.

Disaster Faces China.
Here I was in Sian once again—Sian, the cradle of the Chinese race. I caught myself wondering if it would also be its coffin. If the generalissimo were prevented from leaving it alive, the nation would be sorely riven, and incalculable disaster would come upon it. If he could go out, the nation would be more solidified than ever, and from near-disaster would come great blessings. "Out of evil cometh good," sang in my mind, and I believed it.

Yet, if wisdom did not prevail, Sian would be a death-trap truly. Hemmed in, we were, with troops waiting orders from their masters. Beyond them were the Red hordes, which the generalissimo had been fighting for years. All were waiting, expectant and impatient. And beyond the borders of China others waited and watched. Why was I fighting to prevent an attack on Sian being launched? Not primarily to save the life of my husband, but because I foresaw the range of calamity that could come upon China as the result of any impulsive use of force.

There were the armies of the northwest, formidable in numbers and well-equipped, which would naturally respond to any attack by promptly joining forces with the Red armies behind them.

Immediately such a junction took place the Reds would be revitalized and the whole combination would be galvanized into an action which would probably lead to an unprecedented civil war, with an unpredictable end.

Such a condition could easily result in ruthless intervention by a country which has long been seeking such an excuse to justify a large-scale invasion to gain the complete dominance of our country.

(Editor's note: Mme. Chiang's reference here is, of course, to Japan.)

That nightmare was ever in my mind from the moment I realized the determination of military officers to attack Sian.

She Sends for Chan.

I sent for Han-chen. Probably he was relieved because I did not upbraid him, but, whatever it was, I was able immediately to talk quietly and sincerely to him. I endeavored to show him that he and his associates were laboring under a delusion if they thought the people of the country were with him. I told him that he had made a bad mess of things and now the question was, how was he going to get out of it?

"If you had asked me," I said, "I could have told you that you could not get the generalissimo to do anything by using force."

"But this would never have happened at all had you been here, Madame," he surprised me by saying. "We did wrong in seizing the generalissimo, but we tried to do something which we thought was for the good of the country. But the generalissimo would not discuss things with us. He was so angry that he would not talk at all. Please, you try to make the generalissimo be less angry and tell him we really do not want anything, not even for him to sign anything. We do not want money, nor do we want territory. I told him I believed him, because if he did he would be no better than the old-time militarists. However, he had to prove that to the rest of the world by immediately effecting the generalissimo's release without obliging him to make any commitments. I explained to him that he was too impatient and impulsive, and that many things could not be won by taking drastic action. Progress was attained only by uniform and slow methods. In other words, the whole nation had to be brought up to the proper level, and even then results would be slow and seemingly poor.

Chang Admits Error.
I pointed out that I had often spent 100 per cent of effort to get 1 per cent of result. China could not be changed by spectacular actions; that could only be done by painstaking and slow and steady work.

"Madame," he repeated, "I know I have done wrong, and I am not trying to justify myself or this action. The motive was good and it would never have happened if I had been here with the generalissimo as you usually are. I tried again and again to speak to the generalissimo, but each time he shut me up and scolded me violently."

"You do not understand the generalissimo," I said. "The generalissimo only scolds people in whom he has hopes. If he thinks people are useless, he just dismisses them—he won't take the trouble to scold them. You always told the generalissimo that you looked upon him as a father, and he took you at your word."

"You know I have always had great faith in you," the young marshal said, "and my associates all admire you. When they went through the generalissimo's papers, after he was detained, they found two letters from you to the generalissimo which caused them to hold you in even greater respect. They saw by those letters that you were heart and soul with the people and therefore they know, as I know, you can adjust this situation, so far as the generalissimo is concerned, so that he can quickly leave Sian. We wish him to leave safely and well because we do not wish in any way to interfere with the generalissimo's work or welfare, since he is our leader and we wish to follow him. If he will only let us explain our ideas, everything will be satisfactory, and that you can get him to do."

Letters Impressed Chang.
I asked him what he meant

when he mentioned two letters from me to the generalissimo and he said one was the suggestion referring to the raising of funds for the defense at Suifu.

"In the other letter," he said, "you said something to the generalissimo about your joint work for China, and that you felt that you both had fallen far short of your duty and that the nation should have made greater progress. And you said that, in order to be worthy of the confidence the people placed in you both, you should strive more to fulfill the vows you made on your wedding day to work for the people. These words moved us, especially when you wrote that it was by God's grace that more mistakes were not made than had been made, and that you felt you should pray more for divine guidance."

I took this opportunity to impress upon Han-chen that, if he really wanted to do something, he must seek spiritual guidance on all occasions. I pointed out that his actions not only violated every law of decency and order but, as a responsible military man, they put him beyond the pale. Worse than that, they struck at the very foundation of the national unity that it had taken so long to achieve, and which had just now materialized to the credit of China, and to her lasting good.

As to not wanting to harm the generalissimo, I pointed out, although he had said they meant no harm to the generalissimo, he must remember that, on the morning of December 12, when the shooting started, the generalissimo, thinly clad, was exposed to the rigorous cold of a snow-covered mountain for several hours while bullets whizzed on every side. And that it was only by the mercy of divine providence that he did not die from the bullets of the machine guns or from pneumonia.

"But let us not talk about that," I continued. "The thing to discuss is how to bring this incident to a rapid conclusion, for every hour the generalissimo is detained, the harder it will be for us to restore normal conditions. Tell me, how shall we go about this?"

Han-chen replied that, as far as he was concerned, he would be willing to release the generalissimo immediately. Others were implicated in the affair, he explained, and he could not make a decision without getting their consent.

Tell Them What I Said.
"Well, then you had better go and tell them what I've just said," I urged, "and if any of them want to see me, or if you think I can influence any of them, just send them here and I'll see them. I will wait up for your reply." Now it was late at night.

I waited until 11 o'clock, and, as he still did not return, I sent a telephone message to inquire of his whereabouts. I was told that he was at a meeting. I gave instructions that, after the meeting, he should come to see me.

By 2 o'clock in the morning, he still did not appear, and so I telephoned again. A few minutes later he came, looking terribly harassed and heavy-eyed. He explained that, as the meeting ended so late, he thought I had already retired and did not want to disturb me.

"What did they say?" I asked. "Yang and his men are not willing to release the generalissimo. They say that since T. V. and Madame are friendly toward me, my head would be safe, but what about theirs? They now blame me for getting them into this affair and say that, since none of our conditions is granted, if they released the generalissimo now they would be in a worse fix than ever. There will be another meeting tomorrow."

I saw that he was worn out and that nothing could be gained by prolonging the conversation.

I said, "It is already nearly 3 o'clock. We'll talk this over tomorrow. You'd better get some rest."

(To Be Continued Tomorrow)

S. J. Scarborough Is Ordered Sent To Lowndes Gang

S. J. "Slim" Scarborough will get his transfer request. The Georgia Prison Commission has ordered the life-terminer sent to the Lowndes county chain gang, it was announced yesterday.

The escape artist, who gave himself up to Fulton officers Saturday declaring he only escaped because he and the Cherokee warden couldn't get along, requested he be sent to the Lowndes county chain gang as there he could be near his "people" and would be allowed to see them.

Scarborough's last escape was from the Cherokee chain gang camp April 3. He and eight companions sawed out the second story jail bars and lowered themselves to the ground with a blanket rope. Seven are still at liberty.

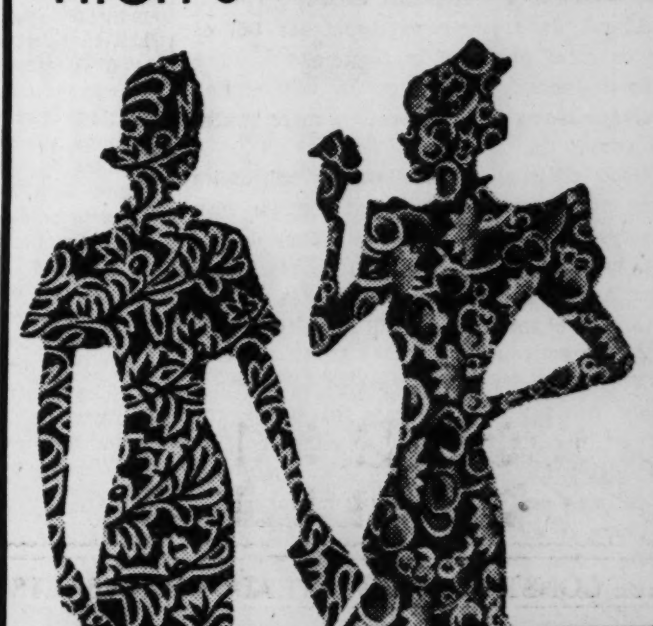

The commission yesterday took under consideration the increasing number of chain gang escapes and announced warden will be instructed to take extra precautions to prevent future jail breaks.

SOVIET FLYER REACHES NORTHERNMOST FOLK

MOSCOW, April 19.—(P)—The world's northernmost habitation, Rudolf island, 2,500 miles from Moscow and about 550 miles from the north pole, reported the safe arrival there today of F. C. Golovin, Soviet flyer making an ambitious aerial survey of the arctic regions.

Golovin left Moscow for his flight March 23. A Soviet wintering party of 17 members has been seven months on Rudolf island, part of Franz Josef Land. It lies just below the 82nd parallel, a little more than eight degrees from the pole.

ATLANTA, GA., APRIL 20, 1937.

IN AGAIN, OUT AGAIN

"Slim" Scarborough, an "in again, out again" Georgia convict, has voluntarily surrendered following the most recent in a series of escapes from state prison camps that has totaled six in five years, and boasts "I can beat the law any time I want to."

Unfortunately, there has been furnished ample corroboration of this statement. Under normal conditions it would probably be accepted as the bombast of an outlaw, but Scarborough was only voicing a personal view of a condition that undeniably exists.

Almost daily the news dispatches tell of one or more prisoners in Georgia who have escaped—though, to be accurate, the method of escape seems to be generally a mere "walking away."

Good citizens of the state do not desire their prison authorities to treat convicts with unnecessary severity or cruelty. They do desire, however, that there shall be reasonable expectancy, when a criminal is sentenced to a term on a chain gang, he will serve that term.

As the gangs are conducted today, the ease with which so large a proportion of prisoners escape would tend to indicate that those who remain in custody must do so either because they enjoy the life or because of a serious lack of initiative in their individual mentalities.

There is something seriously wrong somewhere. Whatever it may be, that condition should be promptly remedied.

DEMOCRATIC WOMEN TO MEET

A gathering of unusual importance to the southeast is to be held in Atlanta on April 28 and 29. On those days the women's division of the Democratic national committee will sponsor a conference here of the Democratic women of this region, which includes Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida and Georgia.

Leaders in the national committee, including Miss Mary W. Dewson, of New York, vice chairman; Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, director of the women's division, and Mrs. May Thompson Evans, assistant director, will attend and take prominent part in the discussions.

Mrs. Charles W. Tillet Jr., of Charlotte, who was in charge of the national speakers' bureau for the committee during the last national campaign, is also listed among the speakers.

No more important factor in the future of party and governmental affairs in America exists today than the growing interest in and knowledge of the administration of public affairs among women. Each election finds women better and better equipped by knowledge to take active part in the determination of the outcome and each administration sees women more and more taking active part in the councils of their government.

The announced purpose of the conference to be held here is "to encourage women to become fact-finding and government-minded." The day is rapidly nearing when intelligent, thoughtful women will exert a far greater influence on the politics and the government of the nation. As that day draws nearer they should accept every opportunity presented for greater knowledge of the facts of government.

For the gathering of April 28 and 29 the official hosts are Mrs. J. A. Rollison, of Waycross, chairman, and the Georgia Affiliated Democratic Women's Clubs. Mrs. Virginia Polhill Price, of Louisville, Ga., national committeewoman, and Mrs. Helen Williams Coxon, of Ludowici, are assisting Mrs. Rollison in making the Georgia arrangements for the program.

WILL IT WORK?

An interesting experiment designed to smother the fires of a world war before the conflagration spreads is now being made in Europe, with Spain and its civil combat the laboratory for the test.

Recognizing that the danger of a world war springing out of the Spanish situation lies chiefly in belligerents of other powers being drawn into the conflict, and the ever-present probability that this condition will arouse jealousy and dispute among other nations, four of the great powers have instituted a patrol, by land and sea, for the purpose of keeping outsiders from taking part in the struggle between Spanish Loyalists and Insurgents.

The warships of Britain, France, Germany and Italy now patrol the entire Spanish coast in a grim ring of steel, while land patrols watch the French, Portuguese and Gibraltar borders. It is not the purpose of these patrols, it is stated, to halt men or shipments seeking to enter Spain. It is their duty merely to report all such entries to the powers, thus keeping straight the record as to which countries are furnishing material aid to either side in the civil conflict.

Inasmuch as the powers have already agreed between themselves not to provide men, munitions or the materials of war to the Spaniards, the patrol, if efficiently and honestly operated, should succeed in isolating the war fever spot of the world and thus prevent spreading of the disease of battle into other portions of Europe and the world.

The plan is simply that used by every hospital for contagious disease, applied on a world scale to the contagious horror known as war.

TAX DELINQUENT COUNTIES

The report by State Auditor Tom Wisdom that more than $2,000,000 in uncollected taxes is due the state by various counties, and that more than $1,000,000 has been delinquent for at least three years, and some of this for eight years, reveals one reason why the state is faced with so serious a problem in raising necessary revenue.

Four counties, the auditor's report states, failed in 1936 to report on any tax collections at all, and other counties are named as showing what are alleged to be excessive commissions held out by the tax collectors when remitting to the state. Twenty-eight, it is said, held out in excess of the 2-1-2 per cent legally allotted as fee.

Taxpayers over the state will consider deeply this report by the auditor. Explanation of the delinquency should be promptly forthcoming and efforts should be made at once to collect as much as possible of the large sum due the state treasury and unpaid.

Those who pay taxes rarely enjoy the experience, under the best of circumstances. To learn that the money they pay does not go to the place for which it is designated will conduce to a still greater reluctance to meet the demands of the tax collector.

THE HOPE OF THE WORLD

The recent visit to America of an unofficial group of observers from England, and their published comments on the friendship for England evidenced in their contacts on this side of the ocean, again emphasize the growing realization that the chief hope for perpetuation of the finest ideals and institutions of modern-day civilization rests in the great English-speaking nations of the world.

At a time when political and militaristic experimenters are ravaging the ideals, the heritage and the life of the peoples of other nations, the great groups of Anglo-Saxons, the peoples of the same mother tongue, English, stand firm for those solid, conservative and tried principles of government and of life that act as anchors in the sea of international strife.

England, the United States, Canada, Australia and other great English-speaking nations are drawn together in closer bonds of friendship than ever before by the mad turmoil that disturbs less stable nations.

The south, especially, feels close to the mother country. No section of America is descended more directly from that English stock which gave to the world the Magna Charta and the principles of common law upon which our laws of today are based. In the south live a people through whose veins runs, almost unchanged, the same blood that coursed through the veins of those Englishmen who fought and died for the principles of liberty and freedom of the citizen which Englishmen and their cousins, all over the world, today hold so dear.

We of the south are of the same stock as were the founders of democracy as the world knows it today and to the English-speaking people has fallen the task of upholding those banners of constitutional government which alone stand firm in a weltering sea of Communism, Fascism, Sovietism, Nazism and all the other isms that plague the world.

The English-speaking peoples constitute today, more than ever before, the chief hope for survival of the finest of our civilization has brought forth, and only by continued and greater mutual friendship can they carry on together in a world grown strange and fearful.

A western embezzler of public money says he has none of it left and thinks the court should take this into consideration. The wind, it seems, must be tempered to the shorn wolf.

THE CHIANG KAI-SHEK SAGA

(From the New York Times.)

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek is not only a picturesque, but a powerful figure, in the turbulent drama of resurgent China. She disproves the legend of the oriental woman by playing a more open and active part in the Chinese revolution than is permitted to her most audacious contemporaries in the west. Far from being the power behind the throne, Mme. Chiang is known as the chief counselor of her husband. She is the daughter of a potent and wealthy family, and during her years as a student at Wesleyan College learned not only to speak and write English fluently, but to understand the mind and methods of the country. The story she writes in collaboration with the generalissimo of his kidnapping and release is a thrilling and extraordinary tale. The Times publishes it in nine installments, for its own interest as narrative and for the vivid light it throws on the confused development of the new China.

This saga of a veritable battle and a striking victory is a great historical document and will take its place in the notable series of historical documents hitherto presented in the columns of the Times.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON.

WET JOKER WASHINGTON, April 19.—If Democratic Treasurer W. Forbes Morgan had not recently jumped to the distillers for a reputed $100,000 per year, there would be no commotion over a hidden liquor joker in the new federal trade commission bill. As it is, there is plenty. Even President Roosevelt is said to have interested himself to avoid an embarrassing predicament.

Sharp legislative eyes spotted an obscure sentence tucked into the middle of the sixteenth page of the new federal trade commission bill. The measure, as a whole, lays down strong restrictions against false or misleading advertising practices for food, drugs, cosmetics or other "devices." Then comes this unexpected restriction: "This section shall not apply to distilled spirits, wine or malt beverages as such commodities are defined in the federal alcohol administration act."

This safeguarding of the distillers' interests is said authoritatively on the inside not to have originated with Mr. Morgan or any of the other half-dozen or so high new orderers who lately have joined the same business group. The job is being attributed to one or two congressmen.

Nevertheless, off-the-record discussion at the Capitol has become hot enough to draw from the Treasury an unpublished official protest to congress against the provision.

SPRING BOARD This is the first unhappy moment caused Mr. Roosevelt by the recent denigrations of his political and official friends to the new and rapidly growing liquor industry. It can hardly be the last.

Shortly after Mr. Morgan had left the Democratic national committee to go into the big money, one of the able Michelson publicists there, Norman Baxter, also shifted to the distilled spirits institute. About the same time, Mr. Roosevelt's minister plenipotentiary to the Costa Rican government, the capable Leo R. Sack, folded his high hat and joined Schenley Products Company. Two Treasury employees also have entered this same productive field. Of course, Dr. James M. Doran, long associated with the old Treasury prohibition unit, is drawing $50,000 annually as head Washington man for the institute.

For these and other reasons, the house Interstate Commerce Committee probably will snip the joker from the bill some time this week.

Note—The official explanation for permitting liquor advertising from Federal Trade Commission supervision is that the Federal Alcohol Administration already has this authority. However, that FAA authority is not as extensive as is proposed for other products under FTC. The present government regulations do not go much beyond requiring that the age and contents be stated truthfully.

NEXT Negotiations have been under way for some days which may take another New Deal left-winger into a large, or semi-large, private business. The negotiators are not the molasses group, which lured Dr. Tugwell, but someone just as sweet.

PRICES Recently, the President has been saying that durable goods prices are going too high and that his policies would be switched to help the non-durables. (The durables are steel, copper and the heavy goods, while the non-durables are things more closely associated with the average citizen, such as food and clothing.)

It is hard to believe, but the government has no figures on the relative prices of durables and non-durables, as a whole. That is, government economists know the prices on all the various products but have not computed an average for either group.

The best available figures are those of the National Bureau of Economic Research in New York city. Its latest price computations show:

	(1929 equals 100)	Durable Goods	Non-Durable Goods
1935 Average		87.0	81.2
1936 Average		88.5	81.7
1937 January		93.1	82.7
February		94.5	83.8

This indicates the President is right in his assertion that durable prices are ahead of non-durables, but they are not as far ahead as the average of the years 1935 and 1936.

NOTES The Treasury has not yet expressed itself, but it has no objection to the Cochran proposal to levy income taxes on federal and state employees under a constitutional amendment. From the standpoint of a more equal distribution of taxes, the proposition is appealing, but, from a revenue-raising standpoint, it is unattractive. Federal and state salaries are low.

The victory of Lyndon Johnson, newly elected house member from San Antonio, is being advertised as a triumph for the President's court proposal. On the surface it was; but many astute Texas authorities suspect Johnson's popularity as head of the national youth movement there would have afforded him a victory regardless of the position he took on the court plan.

The Norwegian government's delay in approving the appointment of Mrs. Daisy Harriman has prompted much speculative conversation in diplomatic circles. There seems to be an undercurrent of feeling that some foreign governments do not particularly like our policy of naming eminent political or social women to diplomatic posts, although they will never hear them say so aloud.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

And so, we went a-walking
To see what we could find,
We wandered to the country

We found a bird a-singing
Near a bunch of goldenrod,
We found wild beauty, winging;
I think that we found God.

Here's Coincidence.
Friend of mine who travels for his salary, was coming home for the first time in his life. Woke up man berth early Saturday morning, bestirred himself and went to the smoker for shave, wash, etc.

Finished with his toiletries and dressing and with some minutes to spare before the train pulled into Atlanta, he sat beside another man there and the two fell into desultory conversation.

At last the stranger asked:
"Live in Atlanta?"
"Yes," replied my friend. "Well, not exactly, but in Decatur."

"Wouldn't you like to make new acquaintances?"
"What street?"
My friend informed him.
"What number?" asked the stranger with a start of surprise.

He was told. Then he grinned and stuck out his hand.
"Howdy, neighbor," he exclaimed.
"Meet the fellow who lives next door to you."

That's true and it doesn't indicate unneighborliness, either. They had been next door neighbors for about three months, but both traveled most of the time and just hadn't contacted each other at home.

Speaking Of Neighbors.

Speaking of neighbors, there is a most charming young lady next door to me. She is, I believe, eleven years old.

Recently she expressed a desire to possess a dog of her own and her father told her she could have a puppy if she would provide a place for it to live.

So, for several days, the young lady has been mighty busy with the spreading glory of the dogwood trees in her back yard. She is taking to pieces an old piano case and rebuilding it into a dog kennel.

She's handy with saw and hammer and nails, too, and some lucky pup is going to have a tight and comfortable canine residence.

Now, Speaking Of Pups.

One thing does lead to another, doesn't it? Soon the column will be complete if this keeps up.
However, speaking of pups, some other friends have a little fellow —no, I forgot, her name is Duchess.

Fair Enough

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Lawful MIAMI, April 18.—One way to abolish crime is Larceny to legalize it and that is what Florida attempted to do with the slot machine racket. The state authorized licenses for the state-armed bandits at the rate of one for every 100 inhabitants which meant that Dade county, including Miami and Miami Beach, was entitled to 1,500 permits.

The license fee was $60 for each bandit, of which the county and state took $30 and the municipality the other half. It was later pointed out that the bandits are not sold but leased through agents or licensees who leased them, in turn, to the local storekeepers, who had taken out the permits for their operation.

So the state courts decided that agents also would have to buy licenses at the same rate. That meant a nut of $120 per machine, but this was a trifling matter.

Even in a square machine, the chance of hitting the jackpot is estimated at one in 8,000, and the payoff, even then, ranges between 8 to 1 and 150 to 1. There are bandits in operation which have not been known to give a jackpot all year, for there is nothing to forbid the insertion of a gimmick in the gears to make certain that it will never succumb to a generous impulse.

The machines were set up in stores and saloons all over the place and the harvest has been incalculable, but one representative of the slot machine law, an injunction said this writ would deprive his clients of $20,000,000 in profits this year in Dade county alone, so it is likely that the rake-off in the state since the season began last fall has far exceeded the profits of the palmiest days of Monte Carlo.

Racket's Last fall, most of the Revenue counties voted by popular referendum to repeal the slot machine law and Dade county was among them. It was held, however, that the existing licenses must be respected until their expiration next October and there is no reason to expect serious interference even then.

The bandits will simply return to the old, illegal status. Business will continue as usual and the local statesmen, who lost their private and unofficial licensing powers will resume their informal, but highly lucrative dealings with the racket. Illegality never embarrassed the slot machine law before the law and the community never was naive enough to believe that the elected officials were in politics for their health or for their official pay.

They have a curious attitude toward graft in Florida. Not even the teachers appear to mind it.
This season the slot machine law, through the ingenious interpretation of a gambling house operator from the north, was stretched to permit the operation of roulette and crap tables, bird cage and all the standard devices of the fully equipped gambling house.

Licenses The law mentioned
"other devices" and the dealer from the north bought five licenses for five table games which he defended as "other devices" in the intent of the legislature. Other operators likewise transferred bandit licenses to their tables and by attaching a slot to a table and dropping coin in the slot before each deal, the operator complied with the law. The coin could be a dime, a nickel or even a penny.
It was nobody's business what it was and the operator was not bothered to insert a fresh coin each time. The machine was his and he could tap it any time he liked so he just put a coin in the slot and held his hand under to catch it when it came out.

Next fall, of course, owing to the repeal by popular vote, the protection of the bandit law, removed from the parlor games too, but like the slots, they always prospered and suffered little molestation before the law, so there is no reason to believe they will be harassed unduly next sesson. Provided, of course, that the proprietors make the proper arrangements.

Viewing the joyous open abandon with which the rackets operate in Miami no practical, worldly person can feel any sense of indignity. The community revels in its utter immorality and common citizens have no feeling of being betrayed.

Your correspondent's sensation therefore is one of awe at the magnificent gall of the grafters, the cocky impudence of the racketeers and the stupendous total of the take both in graft and profit.

Omar Khayyam.

Edward Fitzgerald was born in England March 31, 1809, 50 years before he discovered the poems of Omar Khayyam for the west.
Copies of the first edition of his translation of the Rubaiyat are worth a fortune today, yet they brought Fitzgerald nothing. English magazine editors didn't consider it worthy publishing, and when Fitzgerald had 250 copies of the poetry printed at his own expense in 1859, it was so little appreciated that copies were sold at junk prices by bookshops. Swinburne had to discover Fitzgerald before the western world would discover Omar.

A Few Well-Directed Kicks Can Change a Sap Into a Cynic

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Bill Jones, a prosperous village merchant, invented a useful gadget and sold the patent on terms that made him immediately rich and from first to last paid him $5,000,000.

Bill was big-hearted. He liked people. Being country-raised he greeted everybody with a friendly grin and called a neighbor "good morning" to friends across the street. He enjoyed doing good and now that he was rich he resolved to move to the city and make his fortune for the benefit of mankind.

Within a week he had bought a house in the city and made his possessions. The last trip to the village was made on Sunday. As he neared the city on his way back, his motor coughed and died. He was out of gas. He tried vainly to flag the cars whizzing by. At last an open car slowed down. A man and two women occupied the front seat.

"Got any gas?" yelled Bill.

"Plenty of it," the man answered. Then he and the woman laughed loudly and the car sped away.

Bill walked three miles under a hot sun to a roadside filling station which was closed. An old man with whiskers sat on the porch of a nearby residence.

"I don't sell no gas on Sunday," said the old man. Bill walked two miles farther to find another station.

Next day, Bill left his new home in the city and walked downtown to begin his career of philanthropy.

He remembered that his wife had asked him to get a bottle of rubbing alcohol and stepped into a corner drug store. Prohibited was still in force, but he had forgotten it.

A self-righteous clerk heard Bill's request and growled: "don't run a barroom." Then he turned his back.

Bill needed revenue stamps for a deed and entered a corner bank to get them. A young man with varnished hair elevated nose and looked over Bill's head.

"We have revenue stamps," said he, "only for our customers."

Bill walked to the building where the city welfare organization had its headquarters and asked for the manager. He was rejected to the second floor, where he faced a row of ground-floor doors without a sign. He began to open doors.

As he placed his hand on the second knob, a male voice behind him bellowed: "What in h— are you doing? Get away from there. Can't you read?" It was the voice of a big shot.

Bill peered closer. On the inside of the glass, faintly visible, was a code sign lettered in pencil. It said "Ladies' Toilet."

Bill felt wronged. "I was looking for the manager," said he, thought—

"I'm the manager," said the big shot. "What do you want?"

"Well," said Bill, "I thought I wanted to give a million dollars or so to help the down-trodden, but I've decided it's good for me to be in that fix. They're the only ones that seem to have manners."

WORLD'S WINDOW

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Traversing Texas.

HOUSTON, Texas.—I hope I will not appear quite as naive as a certain gentleman from Rochester, N. Y., of whom it is said that he came down to San Antonio, Texas, to attend a retail grocers' convention, totting a couple of heavy caliber revolvers to protect himself against wild Indians and blood-thirsty Mexicans, whom he seriously believed he was laying in wait down here for people such as he. But I would like to have seen at least one of those famous five-gallon hats, or better yet a few of those lustrous fellows dressed in colored shirts and buckskin trousers, who, with their unearthly yells, did so much toward luring up the parade of the American Legion in Paris a few years back. They were the clue of the procession and the good Parisians, who are not so easily won in matters of costume and accoutrement, did not get over their astonishment for days.

I am frankly disappointed—no cowboys, no silver-studded saddles, no gun-bearing desperadoes, just immense stretches of prairie land stewing in a moist heat. Even the herds of cattle look too tame and sedate. I fit into that old mental picture I had of stampedes and round-ups.

I had always been told that to refer to a man as a sheep farmer in these parts was tantamount to calling him a 100 per cent villain and good-for-nothing. There is a comprehensive sentiment at the bottom of that breezy appreciation of an individual who has anything to do with sheep, for if there is one creature more dumb and idiotic in this world than a sheep I don't know of it. I always experience a certain reluctance even upon reciting the 23rd Psalm for the very reason that whoever recites it compares himself to one of those abjectly docile animated patches of wool. But I must tell you this, that after looking for several days upon the Texas landscape that I do not see how a single human being ever survived in these parts, if the aversion to sheep is really so genuine. There are more sheep farms than cow ranches. I cannot see how men and women can avoid getting into exterminatory feuds, for how can they possibly avoid referring to what seems to be one of the chief industries. Or is it a branch of agriculture, this wool-growing business? Maybe, I thought, as I looked upon those multitudinous herds with their dumb-Dora eyes and greedy little tongues, maybe people spare each other's sensibilities by just calling it silver fox raising. So be it! But every second Texas countryman is a silver fox farmer, if you get what I mean.

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"His soul proud Science never taught to stray Far as the solar walk or Milky Way . . ."

"More by your number than your light,
You common people of the skies,
What are you when the moon shall rise?"

As the moon of a new leadership and philosophy arises over American business heathens, the lesser lights must be confused indeed. Many of the subordinates in business must find it hard these days to understand the progress and social-minded economics sponsored by leaders to whom they are accustomed to look as a veritable moon. They were perplexed and shocked when Myron Taylor committed the great Steel Corporation to genuine collective bargaining. They were perplexed and shocked when Herbert Hoover, rejoicing in the Wagner act decisions, declared that the nation has developed business activities beyond the reach of the states over which regulatory power must be lodged somewhere. They were perplexed and shocked at the intimation of a new point of view in the very citadel of their skies, the House of Morgan.

Particularly, we think, is there shock in the south, for in business leadership as in so many other things, the south has more extremes than the rest of the country, more forward-looking, more reactionary.

Listen—for forward-looking and new philosophy—to President John Lester Perry, of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company, in recent address at Montgomery: "The retarding influence in the economic development of the southland is the poor distribution of wealth, which certainly can be remedied by the ever-increasing progressive intelligence of our leaders." If that is not another and better way of saying that prosperity for the south must be regional now rather than colonial, looking not merely to the production of wealth but also to the distribution of wealth, we do not understand English. If it is not another and better way of making southern purchasing power at once the excuse for southern industry and its greatest hope of reward, we are blind and deaf indeed.

Listen, for further example, to President Donald Comer, of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, in a recent address on the textile mission to Japan: "Our government is definitely committed to the program of seeing to it that the people have the money to buy the things that they make. This is a world problem, and America is working hard at the job. . . . If my interests as a spinner conflicted with the interests of the cotton farmer, I would say the cotton farmer first. But I have never thought that the prosperity of our cotton farmers had to come at the expense of our textile workers' jobs."

Listen, again, to President Thomas W. Martin, of the Alabama Power Company, in his recently published annual report: "With increasing purchasing power in the south and its vast store of raw materials as yet scarcely touched by the hand of man, coupled with overcentralization of industry in many other sections, the trend of industry to move south is more pronounced than at any time in the past."

The south is a land of new purchasing power! The south is a great market for its own goods and the goods of other sections! That is the new economy to which efforts of our most enlightened social and economic leaders are be-

$10,000 Fire Nearby, Boys Go on Fishing

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 19.—(P)—A $10,000 fire swept through the Mulherin Lumber Company yards here today, bringing out all the city's fire-fighting equipment.

Several firemen suffered minor burns from moving hot timbers. Loull Mulherin, owner, who estimated the damage, said the loss was covered by insurance. Two small boys fishing in a canal near the scene did not leave their lines during the excitement.

ing directed now. And successfully. Paul Mallon, in his Washington column, wrote emphatically the other day of this phenomenon of purchasing power in the south. "Keen New York analysts," he reported, "agree that one of the most significant and least noticed developments . . . has been the elevation of the south to a consuming power comparable to that of the rest of the country."

Not since the War Between the States, according to Mr. Mallon, has the south "pulled its full weight in terms of purchasing power. . . . Astute comment runs that this development is like adding 25 per cent to the economic area of the nation."

MAYOR PROMISES PAY RESTORATION

based on increased net receipts of $1,048,000. Hartsfield pointed out that "there is nothing in this sheet for the operation of the metropolitan sewage disposal plants when they open this fall, there is not a dime more for Grady hospital, which needs $15,000 for medicine and supplies, there is not a dime more here for contingencies which will arise later."

He said he was willing to advance on this sheet because of his belief that good business would bring in revenue beyond anticipations. He explained the legalizing of liquor would mean $50,000 a year or more to Atlanta, but pointed out the city expects but little revenue from increased license fees.

Stating that the sanitary fee increase is more than $100,000 under anticipations, the mayor outlined the following proposed expenditures of the new revenue: Schools, $253,000; 10 per cent reserve of water funds for replacements, $160,000; reduction of the deficit, $300,000; architect fees for the auditorium, $20,000; motor transport department, $5,000; telephone fund, $500; Battle Hill sanitarium, $5,000; police pension fund, $7,000; prison enlargement, $2,500; street light fund, $70,300; traffic light maintenance, $1,000; cars for police department, $5,000; street signs, markers and paint, $4,300; pumper for fire department, $14,500; and salary restorations under the compromise proposal, $91,000.

Referred to Committee. The mayor spoke on a paper introduced by Alderman Roy Callaway and others setting forth the compromise on salaries and calling upon the mayor to assemble the budget commission to set up funds in the budget and the finance committee to make its recommendations for allocation. Couch moved that it be referred to the finance committee and Hartsfield, relinquishing the chair as mayor pro tem, urged that it take this course. It was referred.

Hartsfield, pointing to the responsibility of "carrying out this program as we promised," denied he had promised city employees their full basic pay on any specified date. He declared he wished to see full restoration and asserted he would do his best to restore all salaries before next year.

HITLER SUGGESTS U. S. CALL PARLEY

Germany Will Willingly Attend World Economic Conference, He States.

BERLIN, April 19.—(P)—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler assured the world today that Germany will attend willingly any international economic conference convened by President Roosevelt or some other leader of a great nation.

The Fuehrer made his announcement a prelude to elaborate ceremonies in observance of his forty-eighth birthday anniversary tomorrow. The ceremonies began tonight with dedication of 90 new flats and apartments for the third army corps which lined the huge square before the Reich chancellery.

Hitler had conferred earlier with George Lansbury, British Laborite member of parliament. An official transcript of his remarks stated:

"Germany would be very willing to attend a conference and partake of a united effort to establish economic co-operation and mutual understanding between the nations of the world if President Roosevelt or the head of some other great country would take the lead in calling such a conference."

Premier Van Zeeland, of Belgium, is to consult with President Roosevelt in June on methods by which trade barriers may be removed to foster peace, his visit backed by British and French urgings. There have been recent reports that President Roosevelt was considering the chances of an economic conference at some unspecified date in the not too distant future. But Roosevelt has denied that the United States intended to take the initiative in any such move.

Officials interpreted today's statement as a reiteration of Germany's oft-heard plea for lowering of trade barriers, so that she may sell her goods if she is to buy those of other nations. The German plan for self-sufficiency, one spokesman said, is a direct consequence of tariff barriers which hamper the flow of her commerce.

voted against the second reading and 11 favored it but a two-thirds majority was necessary. For the moment, the cause was killed.

Councilmen White, Howard Haire and Beck, joined by Alderman Roy A. Callaway (who had voted against the second reading) then initiated a move for reconsideration, to which Couch objected on the grounds the matter was automatically referred to the next regular session, but City Attorney Savage ruled council could reconsider if it wished. It did, by a vote of 10 to 5, and the ordinance was placed on second reading by a vote of 11 to 4. The same 11 carried it to success a moment later on a motion to adopt.

Mayor To Approve. Mayor Hartsfield said last night he will approve the amendments when the paper reaches his desk, within the next day or so.

Voting against the amendments were Councilmen C. M. Bolen and J. A. Couch, Aldermen E. A. Gilliam and Robert Carpenter. Couch moved for the public hearing on the grounds that the people vitally affected by changes at the hospital—the patients—had never been heard from. He asked Councilman J. Frank Beck, of the Grady hospital committee, if it were true trustees have received treatment at the hospital.

Receiving a negative answer, Couch said, "Well, the reports one of them was given dental treatment at Grady must have been untrue."

Hailey, urging the passage of the amendments, pleaded with council not to make a political football out of Grady thus jeopardizing the hospital's chance of receiving six or eight million dollars for improving the hospital. Beck also appealed to council for passage of the amendments.

Couch asked for the public hearing saying that two weeks ago an ordinance, supposedly a cure-all, was introduced and now another cure-all was again before council. He said that if this paper be started between Hapeville and Jonesboro in a few days.

Two large paving projects were included in the group on which bids were asked yesterday. The first of these is the completion of the paving of the LaGrange-Franklin highway in Troup county. The unpaved gap is 4.533 miles long. It will be concreted at an estimated cost of $100,000. The road is part of State Route 1, the most important north-south highway in west Georgia.

The other large project is the paving of 9.693 miles in Houston and Macon counties on the Montezuma-Hawkinsville road. This job will cost about $143,000.

Other projects to be contracted for at the letting follow: Construction of an overhead bridge on the Cordele-Abbeville road in Crisp county. Cost $35,000. Construction of two bridges on the Sylvania-Allendale (S. C.) road in Screven county. Cost $80,000. Construction of an overhead bridge and graded approaches on the Cordele-Abbeville road in

Prisoners Foil Attempted Break By Using Fists

OWENSBORO, Ky., April 19.—(P)—Three prisoners pitched in with their fists today to help Daviess County Jailor Bollington subdue five would-be escapees.

Two of the plotters were Murray Platt and Clarence Lambert, both of Indiana, who face possible death sentences for armed robbery. Bollington said he had gone to the second story to place Platt who had been in the hall shaving, back in the bullpen.

Platt hit him as he unlocked the bullpen door, he said, knocking him to the floor. Then the other four leaped upon him with pieces of iron torn from coats in the bullpen.

The three prisoners-turned heroes interjected with their fists at this point. Bollington seized the metal weapon one of the prisoners had wielded and used it to subdue Platt as the others fled to the first floor. There they were recaptured and returned to their cells.

BRITAIN'S CABINET HEARS 'BAD NEWS'

Secret Session Learns of Budget Expected To Be $4,250,000,000.

LONDON, April 19.—(P)—The British cabinet, surrounded by every precaution against the possibility of a leakage, learned in secret session today how much the government will need to spend next year.

British taxpayers were steady themselves for bad news in Chancellor Neville Chamberlain's budget announcement to parliament tomorrow in which it was expected he would ask for $4,250,000,000 revenue.

Meeting Is Guarded. The special meeting of the cabinet was held in the house of commons and was strictly guarded lest the scandal of last year, when word of the budget estimates leaked out in advance, be repeated. Secrecy was so carefully maintained that not even the cabinet ministers themselves knew what the figures would be until the chancellor, the only person with full knowledge of the details, told them.

Premier's Last Appearance. Chamberlain's budget speech almost certainly will be his last in important appearance before parliament as holder of the country's purse. The chancellor of the exchequer is universally expected to move up into the prime minister's seat, succeeding Stanley Baldwin, who has predicted his own resignation soon after the coronation of King George VI in May 12.

Chamberlain was expected to advise the house of commons tomorrow of the need for $150,000,000 in new revenue, necessary for rearmament. Britain's new 1937-1938 budget has been built against the background of her $2,000,000,000-a-year rearmament program. Closely guarded as are budget plans, commonsense tells the Briton he is going to pay higher income tax and will have to dig deeper for other direct and indirect taxes.

F. D. R.'S COURT PLAN IS PRAISED BY MILES

Social Security Board Member Terms Proposal to People's Interest.

Describing the issue of President Roosevelt's supreme court proposals as a "conveyance upon which the real opponents of rights of men desire to ride," Vincent M. Miles, member of the National Social Security Board, declared he was "for the President and his proposals" in an address here last night.

Miles was chief speaker on a program at Fulton High school, sponsored by Labor's Non-Partisan League of Georgia, and discussed the court program at length.

"If one soberly analyzes the President's proposal, he cannot help but admit that it is not destructive; that it is progressive and essentially in the people's interest," he said.

Expressing his optimism over chances of the plan being adopted, Miles declared:

"However difficult the going looks now, I believe the President will win out. It is just another such battle as that which he fought out—and won—during the presidential campaign. The leading opponents of the President's plan are those who furnished the money and the brains to the Landon campaign. Unfortunately, they have been able to attract to themselves a great number of those who actually supported the President. This has been possible because an enormous amount of propaganda impugning the motives and the honesty of the President has been distributed."

Referring to the men who have served on the court, Miles said: "There have been men on the supreme court with liberal tendencies and who believed in the rights of the ordinary man. And there have been men on the court with ultra-conservative tendencies who believed in the right of a few people to accumulate the wealth of the country and to exploit laboring men and women in order to accumulate it."

"I believe that the great middle strata of American life representing the working people... are behind this program of the President. On the other hand, there are the few extremely conservative people who desire no change at all and the few extremely radical people who want the constitution amended to permit a dictator to control the lives of citizens."

"I think the safe course, therefore, is to stay in the middle ground with the great mass of people who are behind the President, and to ask your own legislative representatives to support the measure."

Roy V. Harris, Augusta, speaker of the Georgia house of representatives, said the "mental gymnastics of Mr. Justice Roberts proved the President's case and the necessity for a new court."

"It is rather ridiculous to me that an act of congress, held unconstitutional over a period of 10

Ormandy to Conduct Symphony Tonight

Famed Philadelphia Orchestra Plays Two Concerts Here Tonight

Organization Headed by Conductors Iturbi and Ormandy Given Big Send-Off on Start of 11,000-Mile Recital Tour.

Without Leopold Stokowski, but with Conductors Jose Iturbi and Eugene Ormandy, the 100 members of the famous Philadelphia orchestra will arrive this afternoon to give two concerts for music-loving Atlantans.

Concerts will be presented at 6:45 o'clock and 9 o'clock tonight at the Georgia theater. Each program will be different.

The concerts tonight will be the first given on a 11,000-mile concert tour that calls for 37 appearances in 23 cities in the United States and Canada within five weeks. From here, the orchestra will go to the Pacific coast, hence to Canada and finally through the Midwest before returning to Philadelphia.

The orchestra is being brought to Atlanta as one of the All-Star Concert series programs. As the orchestra members boarded the "Philadelphia Orchestra Special" in the Pennsylvania city at midnight last night it was years, should suddenly be resurrected by a single member of the court who changes his mind and the court's decision as well, and this act of congress automatically becomes revived and in force," the speaker said.

"It also is ridiculous that the destinies of 130,000,000 souls hang upon the changing whimsies of a single man."

ACCOUNTANTS TO HEAR FEDERAL REVENUE AIDE

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 19.—Milton E. Carter, assistant to the commissioner of internal revenue of the United States, will be the principal speaker at the annual convention of the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants to be held in Augusta April 30 and May 1, according to plans announced by George C. Baird, of Augusta, president.

Carter had accepted the invitation extended through Congressman Paul Brown, of the tenth district.

Another speaker will be T. Coleman Andrews, of Richmond, Va., past president of the Richmond Association of Credit Men.

STATE DEATHS

MISS ANNIE V. MCCARTHY.—Funeral services for Miss Annie V. McCarthy were held Saturday afternoon at St. Patrick's church. Miss McCarthy was a native and lifelong resident of Augusta. She was a member of Chapter A, U. D. C. Surviving her were two sisters, Miss Nellie McCarthy, of Augusta, and Mrs. Burton Doolittle, of St. Petersburg, Fla., and a brother, John McCarthy, of Cincinnati.

MISS MARY MAHER.—Rites for Miss Mary Maher, who died after a long illness, were held Saturday morning at St. Mary's-on-the-Hill. She was a lifelong resident of the city. A sister, Miss Ellen Maher, died two weeks ago, and the same day a cousin, Thomas Hastings, of Atlanta, died here while purchasing a bus ticket to Atlanta. She is survived by a nephew, Thomas Kelly, of Augusta, and a great-niece, Miss Anne Heslin, of Augusta.

MRS. Z. F. HAYWOOD.—Funeral services for Mrs. Z. F. Haywood, 28, who died in Forsyth, Ga., yesterday, was buried here today.

COL. LE POPE.—Funeral services for Colonel Le Pope, 93, died late today at his home at Wildwood, Ga., near here. He was the last Confederate veteran in Dade county, Georgia, and one of two survivors of the N. B. Forrest Camp, United Confederate Veterans, of Chattanooga.

Colonel Le Pope enlisted when he was 15 years of age at Pikeville, Tenn., and served through the war with General Nathan B. Forrest. He was active in north Georgia politics.

T. O. TABOR SR.—Funeral services for T. O. Tabor Sr., 80, for 50 years president of T. O. Tabor & Sons Company, here, died at residence tonight after a short illness. He is survived by his widow and three sons, Frank, John and T. O. Tabor Jr. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

MRS. J. B. FLEMISTER.—Funeral services for Mrs. J. B. Flemister, 78, prominent Dalton matron, died at her home here early Monday after a long illness.

She was born at Greenville, Tenn., in 1858, a daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. William West, of Rome. She had been a Dalton resident 45 years. She is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Hubert Moody, of Atlanta; two sons, Charles Flemister, of Dalton, and L. H. Flemister, of Little Rock, Ark., and two sisters, Mrs. Nannie W. Hamilton, of Dalton, and Mrs. Anne Norton, of Chattanooga. Rites will be held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the First Baptist church, the Rev. James L. Clegg officiating. Interment will be at Tunnel Hill.

MERCURY IN AUGUSTA REACHES 89 DEGREES

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 19.—(AP)—Summer arrived in Augusta today and the local citizenry sweltered under a blazing sun which sent the thermometer soaring to 89 degrees, exactly 24 degrees above normal.

With fair weather predicted, officials of the weather bureau expect the mercury to rise to approximately the same reading tomorrow.

The minimum today was 60 degrees, only five degrees below the normal reading of 65 degrees.

J. HENRY BALDWIN DIES IN SAVANNAH HOSPITAL

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 19.—(AP)—J. Henry Baldwin, superintendent of the Savannah division of the Central of Georgia Railway, died here tonight in the Central hospital following an illness of several weeks.

He has been connected with the Central for the past 45 years. Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

What National Want Ad Week can mean to the Classified Advertiser

ONCE EACH YEAR, the Newspapers of the United States set apart one week, to acclaim and give additional recognition to the tremendous influence Classified Advertising wields in the lives of the American Family and American Business.

Growing from a few scattered notices, placed voluntarily by individuals who had a want to fill, the classified pages of today's newspapers tell a story of service and accomplishment, that has been made possible only by the definite need for a meeting place, where a man or woman, family or business firm, could state their needs or wants and could be assured that their message would reach other folks in the community, who had the means and desires to fill those wants, quickly and economically.

From an inauspicious beginning there has grown The Great American Habit—the habit of reading and using Want Ads—which today are termed "Classified Ads"—due to the practice of grouping similar advertisements in proper classifications that the article, service or want might be more easily found by the reader and that the advertisers' message be more quickly answered.

During National Want Ad Week, The Constitution in conjunction with hundreds of other leading newspapers serving their communities throughout the nation, focuses the spotlight of greater publicity on Classified Advertising, to remind everyone that there is no substitute which will serve them so effectively and economically and to urge those who have not had occasion to enter this great marketplace, to prove for themselves the many ways a Want Ad or Classified Ad will help solve their problems.

Sherman Outsell Lee on Stamp, Three To One, Among Georgians

Georgians have been three times more curious about the looks of General William Tecumseh Sherman, commander of the northern army that cut a swath through Georgia, than about those of General Robert E. Lee, commander-in-chief of the Confederate forces, a check of postoffice records revealed yesterday.

Sherman appeared on the face of a three-cent stamp. Total sales in the state were approximately 300,000.

Lee appeared on the face of a four-cent stamp, issued several weeks after the Sherman stamp. Total sales thus far, after a month of sales of the Lee stamps, have been approximately 100,000. Sales of both have slowed down almost to a stop, according to Postmaster Lon L. Livingston.

Both were sold only on special request and a majority of the sales were to stamp collectors and to a curious general public.

Livingston said he ascribed the low sale of the Lee stamp to the denomination used in the mailing of letters generally and therefore was purchased for use as well as to satisfy curiosity. Six hundred thousand of the Sherman stamps were ordered for the state, and the balance unsold will probably be returned to the north for general sale.

posers," raged on council floor for two hours yesterday afternoon.

Seek Donation Slash.

Alderman Halley and Councilman J. Allen Couch fought to hold donations to $150,000 for the remainder of the year, introducing a substitute motion that this amount be allocated at the rate of $20,000 a month for the months of April, May and June and $15,000 for the remaining months. Council rejected this plan, 7 to 5, after Alderman E. A. Gilliam and Councilmen C. M. Bolen and John A. White appealed for the larger sum.

Mayor Hartsfield appeared before council to urge release of $180,000 and said "the revenue raising program was born of the necessity to raise money for relief."

Carpenter Attacks Report.

Carpenter attacked the budget commission and finance committee report brought in by Gilliam, declaring the setting up of the money and the allocation should be in two papers but Halley ruled the money was set up by the budget commission whether council followed the recommendations of the finance committee or not. The committee was divided in its recommendation. Councilman Couch and Cecil W. Hester voting against $20,000 per month as being too much.

After rejecting the Couch-Halley plan, council followed the finance committee recommendation for $180,000 by a vote of 10 to 2, Couch and Councilman Frank Wilson voting against it.

Halley explained in the aldermanic board meeting that the relief allocation paper will be considered by general council at its next session under the new law passed by the legislature recently. A tie vote formerly killed. Mayor Hartsfield said he would confer today with City Attorney Jack Savage and determine if the relief matter can be considered at a special session. He indicated he would call such a meeting if legal. Halley said it was his understanding the paper could be decided upon by general council at a called meeting.

Halley Explains Vote.

"I vote no to this $180,000 because we agreed to give only $150,000 for relief when we mapped out this program," Halley explained. "If we take a little bit more for this purpose and a little bit more for that, we will come out short on all other things."

The city had been asked for $30,000 monthly by the Board of Public Welfare.

Of the $300,000 anticipated, $90,000 went to the school department, and the remaining $300,000 was put in the electric lights fund as replacement of part of the $55,000 diverted for auditorium seats.

'SCOTTSBORO' NEGRO WILL APPEAL TODAY

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 19. (AP)—Attorney General Carmichael said today appeal of Heywood Paterson, negro convicted in the six-year-old "Scottsboro case," would be submitted to the Alabama supreme court Thursday on briefs.

There will be no oral arguments, Carmichael said.

CONNALLY IS NAMED CIVITANS' GOVERNOR

Villa Rica Man Succeeds Peyton Jones as Sessions Conclude.

F. C. Connally, of Villa Rica, was elected district governor of Georgia Civitan Clubs yesterday at the concluding session of the two-day annual state convention, held in Decatur.

Mr. Connally succeeds Peyton Jones, of Macon. Others elected were the following lieutenant governors: Will Griffith, of Atlanta; Claude Smith, of Decatur; Dr. W. E. Brown, of Newnan; C. Baxter Jones, of Macon, and George C. Rice, of Dalton.

Elected as delegates to the international convention, to be held in June in Tulsa, Okla., were Paul Fite, of Dalton, and Sam Steinback, of Carrollton. Alternates chosen were M. Keelin, of Atlanta, and W. J. Dozier, of Douglasville.

Reports from various committees and officers, submitted yesterday, showed clubs in healthy condition. The next state convention will be held at Douglasville, with the Villa Rica and Douglasville clubs combining as hosts.

Francis E. Cowdrey Jr., of Fitchburg, Mass., international president, addressed the banquet last night.

FUNDS ARE SOUGHT.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(AP) Representative Sam O. McReynolds, of Chattanooga, Tenn., asked congress today to appropriate $100,000 to finance the seventh World's Poultry Congress and Exposition in the United States in 1939.

Atlantan Injured In Freak Accident

Jerome (Jerry) E. Wilson, 22, Ford Motor Company employe, was taken to his home at 617 Kennesaw avenue yesterday following an unusual motorboat accident Sunday afternoon on Jackson lake, Jackson, Ga.

Wilson, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wilson, was cut about the body when another motorboat, driven by a young woman, crashed into his boat. A passenger with Wilson, listed as Miss Ethel Ozmert, of 1145 Peachtree street, was also injured, and was admitted to the Griffin hospital.

According to witnesses, the boat which struck Wilson's craft mounted it completely over the bow, the propeller striking Wilson. The driver of the other boat and a passenger were unhurt, according to reports.

FIREMAN AND WIFE HURT ON VACATION TRIP

Ernest B. Haralson, veteran Atlanta fireman, and his wife were injured last night when a tire blowout caused their automobile to overturn a few miles north of Jacksonville.

They were taken to a Jacksonville hospital, suffering severe head and body lacerations and possible internal injuries. The Haralsons live at 673 Brownwood avenue, S. E. He is stationed at fire station No. 13, Flat Shoals and Metropolitan avenues, and has been in the department more than 12 years.

The Haralsons were on a vacation trip.

RIVERS WILL CONFER ON COUNTY CHARGES

Report of Excess Fees To Be Discussed With Comptroller, Auditor.

Governor Rivers said yesterday he would confer with Comptroller General William B. Harrison and State Auditor Tom Wisdom before taking any action on an auditing report that some counties had retained excessive fees for state services.

Wisdom's report listed 28 counties in which the auditor said excessive fees were deducted from taxes collected for the state.

Letters from the comptroller general's office in 1936 placing varying interpretations on fees allowed collectors produced some confusion, Wisdom held in his report.

Harrison is expected back at his office tomorrow after a long illness. In his absence yesterday, attaches of his office declined to comment on the auditor's report.

Wisdom said some tax collectors had inquired if the state intended to call upon them to pay the fees the report said were excessive.

Rivers said he would confer with Wisdom and Harrison on the question before making any decision on the report, which he had not had time to study fully yesterday.

Asked if the report, which cited $3,884,949 of 1936 state taxes unreported on December 31, last year, would lead him to suggest a new tax collection system to the special general assembly session next fall, he replied:

"I have not considered the question from that angle at all.

"The entire tax question will be open at the session, and it may be possible that the legislature may desire to go into the collection angle.

"The primary interest will be in forms of taxes and methods of assessment, though."

The entire session, to be called some time between Thanksgiving Day and Christmas, will be devoted to the tax problem.

RIVERS MAINTAINS NEUTRALITY STAND ON LIQUOR ISSUE

Governor Will Speak for Amendments To Be Voted on June 8, However.

Neutrality on the liquor question will continue to be Governor Rivers' stand during whatever campaigning may take place prior to the June 8 local option repeal referendum.

"I am going to leave the question entirely up to the people," Rivers said.

"I am not going to take any part of the campaign one way or the other."

The Governor's position is the same he held during the general assembly session when the referendum was voted.

The local option bill, passed by the house on a second vote, and the senate late in the session, provides a statewide election June 8. If approved by a majority vote, the law then will take effect and will permit any county to hold an election to decide whether sale of liquor will be legalized.

The Governor does plan, however, a campaign for several constitutional amendments to be voted at the same time as the liquor question.

He will make at least four radio broadcasts from Atlanta during the campaign, and will speak for the amendments in other addresses at I make."

The amendments he is supporting—"all of which are in the Democratic platform"—include a $2-10 homestead tax exemption, $300 personal property exemption, power for the state and its counties to levy social security taxes and the classification tax amendment.

The dry side of the liquor campaign already has started under direction of W. W. Vaines, head of the consolidated forces for prohibition.

Wet leaders say they will have an intensive campaign, but have not announced any definite organization for carrying it out.

Convention Hears Plea for Youth Character Aid.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(AP) Daughters of the American Revolution gave youth the stage tonight in colorful ceremonies opening their forty-sixth annual congress at Constitutional Hall.

More than 3,000 delegates paid tribute to young America by honoring "best girl citizens" from the states.

Speakers urged character-building agencies among young people to develop leadership, fight crime and broaden education.

Senator Harry Moore, Democrat, New Jersey, counseled D. A. R. members to carry on their work "perpetuating 'the great tradition of American democracy' by aiding the nation's youth and arming them against 'false prophets.'"

FINAL INSTALLMENT.

Effie came dancing into the room waving a piece of white heather. "To bring you luck!"

ter, "and because it's your name, she cried, as she hugged her sister, and I'm not going to cry, not once," she said firmly though her lip quivered.

"Nobody is going to cry," Heather smiling. "We're all going to be perfectly happy, aren't we?"

"You must think only of the day—it's not very far away, my pet—when I shall see you waving to me from the deck of a big ship."

"I shall be waving to you from the minute you go to the minute I see you again," Effie said with earned eloquence, and then not feeling quite sure of herself, she made some excuse and danced away.

And after that there was so much to do and to see and to arrange that it was all like a dream until the moment when Heather found herself alone for a moment with Henry Mathews.

He had insisted upon giving her away, and so all the others had gone on, leaving them to follow. Henry was wearing a brand-new suit and a highly starched collar, which was a little tight, and a sprig of white heather in his buttonhole, but although he smiled, his face was rather strained as he said, looking down at her just before Fisher brought to the door the car that was to take them to London. "Is it—quite all right, my dear?"

She could not answer for a moment, then suddenly she put both arms around his neck and kissed his lips.

"If only I knew you were as happy," she said.

"Me?" Henry laughed, not very successfully. "I'm as happy as a king. Why, I've got Effie and young Bobbie to look after and they won't give me time to think about anything else. I've got a great deal to be thankful for, and I don't forget it." But there was a little moisture in his eyes as he held her from him at arm's length and looked at her as if she were something very precious from which he knew he was parting forever.

"There!" he said at last. "I shall always see you as you look at this moment—the best, sweetest, and God bless you," and then, as if afraid to trust himself, he took her hand and drew her from the room. "Happy is the bride the sun shines on, Fisher," he said cheerily. "And mind you drive carefully—no risks this morning. Has all the luggage gone? Nothing left behind?"

Fisher answered that he had taken it to the liner Southampton himself and had seen it safely on board.

Heather held Henry's hand all the way to London and they were very silent. Although Effie had been disappointed because it was to be such a quiet wedding, she had told every one that Heather looked like a princess in her simple dark brown frock and the soft sable coat that had been Henry's wedding present.

When Heather had protested that it was much too grand and expensive for her to wear, he had answered that nothing was good enough, and that it would make him very happy to know that something he had given her would keep her warm," she had answered, and she thought of her words as they sped on through the sunshine.

There was no one in the world like Henry—there never would be. And yet only a few short months ago she had thought of him as just an ordinary, rather tiresome sort of person—funny how mistaken one could be.

They were all at the registry office, and every one wore white heather, including the registrar himself with whom Bobbie had generously divided his own buttonhole.

And Bruce... Heather flushed adorably as she met his eyes, and her lips trembled. John had been forced to content himself with the office of best man, as nothing he could say would override Henry's determination to give the bride away.

"With this ring..." Effie dropped a silent tear. "Till death us do part—"

"The pretty dear!" Priddy whispered as Bruce, disregarding all ceremony, put his arms round his wife and kissed her, and then, still with her hand in his, Heather turned to Henry.

"The next kiss for you," she said.

And then they all packed into the four big cars that were drawn up in the narrow street outside and sped away to Waterloo.

There was very little time for goodbyes for which every one was thankful. They gathered round the carriage door clamoring for a last word, but Heather could hardly see the faces of her family for tears although she was so happy.

And then just before the train was due to start, Heather disengaged herself from Effie's clinging arms and pushed her way through the crowd to a little woman in black, with very blue, eager eyes, who was standing alone watching the bustle around her.

Heather touched her hand. "Do you remember me?" she asked gently.

The blue eyes were raised to her face but without any recognition until Heather said, "Don't you remember me? We met here one day last summer—when we were both waiting—for someone—my 'some-one' came back—I thought you'd like to know."

The little old face wrinkled into a faint smile.

"Did he? I'm glad. You're more fortunate than I am," Molly Kent said with quiet dignity, and then as the guard's whistle blew she shivered and turned away—Molly Kent, the tragic little figure who had aroused Heather's sympathy the day she came to Waterloo to meet Vilette and the man on Vilette's return from South Africa.

"Good-bye, darling—good-bye," she wrote from Madeira, Heather—and send a cable when you get to Cape Town."

"Don't let Bruce bully you!" This from Bobbie.

"Take care of her, Mr. Bruce." From old Priddy.

"Good-bye my dear—God bless you."

you." Henry Mathews wrung Heather's hand as he put an arm around Effie and drew her back from the train, which had already begun to move. "Good-bye, God bless you."

John so far forgot his dignity to call excitedly for three cheers and it was the last sound Heather heard before Bruce drew her away from the window.

There was a blank silence on the platform when the train had steamed out of sight. They all felt as if the only person that mattered had suddenly been taken from them, and Effie, still trying hard not to cry, looked up at Heather and saw that the tears were running down her cheeks.

She slipped a comforting hand into his.

"Never mind, I'll stay with you—always," she promised rashly and at last began to cry.

About 4 o'clock that afternoon as the big liner was slowly making its way down Channel, Bruce took Heather on deck.

"Come and see the sunset," he said.

They stood hand in hand by the rail looking out over the sea at the sky, which were painted with a thousand glories.

They were silent for some time till Bruce said, "I had a long talk with Henry last night, Heather."

He looked down at her. "I'm not sure that you have chosen the better man, my darling."

She smiled, meeting his eyes. "I am—quite sure."

"The radiant colors of sea and sky have faded now, and only pearly opalescence was left on the fringe of the coming night."

Heather shivered a little but she turned away she said softly. "It's wonderful, isn't it?"

"No—no—no—everything."

They went below to their cabin, which seemed to be filled with flowers, and Bruce shut the door behind him.

Heather had taken off her hat and she looked very young and happy as she turned to smile at him.

"I can't believe it!" she said tremulously. "I can't believe that after all these years I am really your wife."

He came toward her. "I'm not sure," he said. "And mine," she whispered as he took her in his arms.

MORE ABOUT LABRADOR. Thousands of icebergs float along the Labrador coast. They are chunks broken from Greenland valley glaciers. Some bergs reach up only 10 or 15 feet above the water, but others are taller than the smoke-stack or mast of any sea-going vessel. In fact, there are giants which rise as high above the sea as a 25-story building does above land. Seven-eighths of the ice in an iceberg is below water.

It has been figured that a berg 250 feet long and 200 feet wide, and rising only 30 or 40 feet above water, would weigh more than 2,000,000 tons. An iceberg of that weight is not nearly so large as some which have been observed.

Icebergs are a danger to ships which sail along the coast of Labrador, but the captains and pilots are very careful about them. The whole region along the coast has been explored, and interesting names have been given to the bays, islands, and so on. Here are some of the names:

Yankee Cove, Frenchman Run, American Tickle, Ragged Island, Tea Pot Island, Coffee Island, Wreck Bay, Porcupine Point, Lily rocks and Mosquito Cove.

It is perhaps strange to honor mosquitoes by naming anything after them, but the name points out the fact that these insects bother people in far-northern Labrador.

On the land the common way of traveling is with sledge-dogs. The sledges are known by the Eskim name of "komatiks." Usually they are pulled by from 5 to 12 dogs, but sometimes there are 17 or 18.

The dog at the front is the "leader," and must be small enough to obey orders. When the driver calls out "oo-ish" or "hoo-ee," he means that the dog should start going. To stop the team he calls "aw-aw." To tell the leader to turn right, he shouts the word "ouk," and his sign to turn left is "rader." Any dog which does not do his duty is likely to feel the sting of the long whip in the hands of the driver. This whip is made of walrus hide and has a length of from 25 to 30 feet.

The distance covered on a day depends on several things. Traveling over loose snow, on a short day in January, the dogs may go only 25 or 30 miles. On a long day, when the snow is well packed, the team may cover from 90 to 110 miles between sunrise and sunset.

MOLNAR IS ELECTED BY GEORGIA ROTARY TO SUCCEED HARRIS

astiring Governor Reports 768 Members Now Enrolled in State.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 19.—(AP) T. Molnar, 45-year-old Cuthbert, native of Hungary and an American citizen since 1922, today became district governor of Georgia Rotarians.

Molnar was elected to succeed C. Harris Jr., of Atlanta, at the opening session of the ninth annual Georgia Rotary Club conference here.

The new district governor, member of the Cuthbert bar since 1928, and its president in 1934, announced intention to press in Georgia Rotary's program for international brotherhood.

Harris, in his annual report, said the conference Rotary now has 1,768 members in Georgia—the largest membership in the state's history.

The retiring governor reported more new clubs organized in the state during the past nine months than in any previous 12-month period.

Clubs organized during the nine-month period were Bainbridge, Statesboro, Fitzgerald, Emmerville-Trion, Hartwell, Tifton and Cochran.

J. Kendrick Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., representative of Rotary International, and a speaker today, described Rotary as a "leading influence" in international peace.

Many European countries, he said, have their "petit comité" of inter-country committees composed of Rotarians.

"The petit comité" of Germany and France meets every three months to discuss the problems which arise between those countries," he said.

Discussing Rotary's domestic policies, Guernsey said: "Rotary stands for a square deal to the employer, the employee and the public and holds that each must be made to respect the rights of the other."

After the morning session to discuss Rotarians turned to group discussions and a golf tournament. Tonight they danced at the Governor's ball.

argues the union may bring "because they are a lot of hot air." "The Ford Motor Company has never treated its employees unfairly and the union officials know it," Bennett added.

Should the labor board call a hearing to determine if Ford has violated the Wagner labor relations act, it would be the first involving a major manufacturing interest since the supreme court recently upheld the Wagner law.

This law guarantees workers the right to organize and bargain collectively, without interference or intimidation.

Situation Discussed. Martin discussed the situation

Law School Debaters Open Forensic War

The Atlanta Law School debating team, composed of Milton Frank Allen, left, and Sidney F. Schell, Atlanta, opened its local debate series last night against Agnes Scott. The debaters will meet the Georgia Evening School team on April 28. A debate with Emory University is also scheduled.

at Detroit before meeting with his executive board. He said the only question that group would vote on probably would be whether to call a strike in General Motors plants in this country in sympathy with the strike of 3,700 workers in General Motors plants in Oshawa, Ont.

The meeting of the auto union leaders, who are allied with John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, coincided with a conference of the executive council of the rival American Federation of Labor.

Before the AFL session adjourned, a high labor official predicted that it would move quickly toward expulsion of Lewis-affiliated unions from the federation. To expel Lewis-allied unions, the federation council would have to call a special convention of the AFL.

when General Motors sits down and talks to your committee. "No matter who sticks his finger in the pie, this strike will not be settled until the company does just that."

The mayor had acted as go-between in arranging the settlement that both Thompson and J. B. Highfield, plant manager for General Motors, approved.

4-Point Proposal. With newspapermen present, Hall started the mass meeting in the local high school auditorium by explaining the settlement's terms:

1. Cut in the work week to 44 hours.

2. An increase of from 5 to 7 cents in hourly pay rates.

3. No discrimination against strikers.

4. A formula regarding union recognition to be announced by Thompson at his discretion.

Then reporters were herded into

FIREWORKS BANNED IN DOWNTOWN AREA

Council Also Approves Purchase of John A. White Park.

Approval of the purchase of the John A. White park, ban on sale of fireworks in downtown Atlanta; extension of the option for sale of the old city hall site, and efforts to collect sanitary and police service fees from Techwood and the University housing projects were among actions taken yesterday by general council.

Alderman Roy E. Callaway, of the fourth ward, who with Councilman Frank Wilson has sponsored prohibition of the sale and discharge of fireworks anywhere in the city, said "the law is going to be enforced this year and it will be illegal to sell or discharge a firecracker of any kind in downtown Atlanta July 4."

The alderman pointed out that the new ordinance, effective immediately upon approval of the mayor, did not repeal the ordinance which requires permission of the mayor in writing to discharge fireworks anywhere in the city.

Option Extended. Option to sell the old city hall site at Marietta and Forsyth streets for $500,000, which was granted Harold Hirsch, Marion Smith and Jesse Draper recently, was extended from May 1 to July 1 because of negotiations now going on with the government to purchase the plot for a $3,000,000 office building for government agencies. Draper said yesterday chances are excellent for the purchase but that more time was needed.

Council approved contracts already agreed upon by other principals for the city and county to buy the John A. White park from Dr. O. E. Collum for $50,000 over a period of 10 years. The contracts call for the city and county to purchase one-tenth of the land each year, beginning in 1938, and for each year to pay $2,500 per year plus interest.

It is planned to begin operation of the park by the city this year but sewer lines being cut prevent use of the golf course at present, George I. Simons, park manager, said.

A letter from Mrs. C. D. Vinson, chairman of the executive committee of the Murphy Junior High school, P.-T. A., was read to council, asking that aid be given in constructing fire-proof and modern school buildings at Murphy in place of wooden portables, which have been termed "fire traps."

U. S. Fees Discussed. Councilman Frank Wilson introduced a motion asking Hartsfield to confer with United States housing officials relative to collection of fees for the city rendering the projects sanitary and police service was adopted.

Wilson sought to hold up a paper authorizing the water department to cut on water at the University project but was told by Councilman Charlie Chosewood, chairman of the water committee, that the project was already getting and paying for water.

"I don't think we ought to render them any service until they pay for all services," Wilson asserted. Under contracts with the projects, the city is to receive a certain percentage of the gross receipts for giving police, sanitary and fire protection. None has thus far been collected.

Council tabled with little debate a proposed ordinance by Councilman George Lyle making it unlawful to transport dogwood, crape myrtle or honeysuckle blossoms over the streets of Atlanta. The paper exempted licensed flower dealers.

"This is an attempt to stop the vandalism wrecking our countryside and it has the approval of every garden and flower club," Lyle said.

"How can they tell whether I get my wild flowers in Georgia or Alabama," Couch demanded to know.

Proposed ordinances to ban left turns at the intersections of Peachtree with Ellis, Cain and Harris were referred to the third ward delegation, and proposals to put in a number of traffic lights went to the finance committee.

One-hour parking on the Central, Washington, Pryor, Mitchell and Peters street viaducts was approved.

HOWELL ELECTED DIRECTOR OF A. P.

as a director of the organization until the time of his death several months ago.

Other Directors. Other directors named today included Paul Bellamy, Cleveland (Ohio) Plain-Dealer; John Cowles, Des Moines (Iowa) Register and Tribune; William J. Pope, Waterbury (Conn.) Republican, and J. R. Knowland, Oakland (Cal.) Tribune.

Three new directors to represent members in cities of less than 50,000 population were chosen as follows:

Houston, Harte, San Angelo (Texas) Standard; Stuart H. Perry, Adrian (Mich.) Telegram, and Josh L. Horne, Rocky Mount (N. C.) Telegram.

Awaken People. Roper emphasized that two outstanding needs were to awaken people further to their responsibility for law and order and to halt "the deterioration of home life and the common virtues inherent therein."

Frank B. Noyes, publisher of the Washington (D. C.) Star and president of the Associated Press, told the gathering he had no hesitancy in saying that he had "no squawk to make over the decision recently announced by the supreme court (upholding the Wagner labor act)."

"My profound respect for the court is in no wise abated, though I would have been glad if one of the fullbacks had not been overcome by an urge to become a quarterback and to make a dash with the ball of a quarter of a mile or so."

Believed in Right. "Be that as it may," said Mr. Noyes, "we of the Associated Press have believed that we had a right to select the employees through whom we must act in collecting the unbiased, uncolored, impartial news report upon which the 1,300 members of the organization insist as the foundation rock of a free press in America."

Mr. Noyes said an inspection of employer-employee relations in the Associated Press "will show rather an enviable record." He pointed out the Associated Press almost 40 years ago began giving vacations with pay; that it started granting sick benefits to its employees almost 30 years ago; that almost 20 years ago it granted insurance and at the same time put into effect a pension plan, and that today it has established the five-day, 40-hour week generally among its news employees.

14 SCHOOL SAVINGS DEPARTMENT

This special department, operated exclusively by the Fulton National Bank as a service to the Community, serves more than 60,000 Atlanta school children each year. Through this department, where children may deposit as little as five cents a week, the habit of systematic thrift is inculcated and the foundation for a happy life is laid.

Thus, by instilling sound habits in young minds, the Fulton aids the community in the formation of good citizens for the future.

FREIGHT RATE RISE EFFECTIVE TODAY ON CLASS 1 ROADS

Increases Apply To Many Commodities, Including Leaf Tobacco.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(P) Increased freight rates on a large group of commodities will become effective on Class 1 railroads at midnight tonight.

The railroads filed higher rate schedules for 80 commodity groups with the Interstate Commerce Commission 30 days ago. Of the 80 schedules, the commission suspended six, allowing the others to become effective automatically.

None of the increases thus allowed were for commodity groups involved in the general freight rate investigation being conducted before the commission.

Commodities subject to the higher rates include:

Chrome ore and concentrates, manganese ore and concentrates, paper boxes, grease, ground iron ore, paints and varnishes, oxide of iron, sulphate of iron, Portland cement, magnesite, tankage, barn equipment, tobacco leaf, flaxseed and linseed, vegetable plants, explosives, fireworks, drums, nails or tubs, wooden barrels, casks.

The schedules which the commission suspended, for a six-month period, included those proposed on bones, moss and fibre in carloads, certain types of barrels, casks and drums, sodium acetate, and carbon black in carloads.

Business Progress In Recovery Parade

Increased Earnings.
Shown by Railroad.

RICHMOND, Va., April 19.—(P) The annual report of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac railroad, submitted today by Norman Call, president, to the stockholders at the 105th annual meeting, showed an increase in the road's net income for 1936 of 187 per cent over that for the calendar year 1935. It was the best year since 1931.

Remington Rand, Inc., Reports Sales Gain.

NEW YORK, April 19.—(P) Domestic and foreign sales for the year ended March 31 by Remington Rand, Inc., makers of typewriters and office appliances, were estimated by the company today at $46,679,000, the largest since 1931, and a gain of 18.6 per cent over the $39,358,000 for the preceding year.

March sales were put at $5,360,000 compared with $4,227,000 in 1936.

Profit Is Registered For Atlantic Refining.

PHILADELPHIA, April 19.—A profit of $1,983,000 for the first quarter of 1937, compared with a profit of $1,983,000 for the first quarter of 1936, is reported by the Atlantic Refining Company and subsidiary companies.

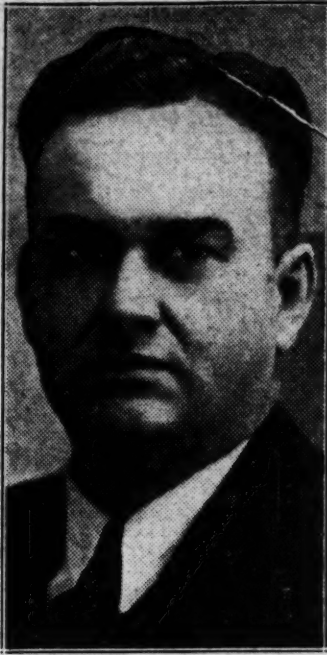

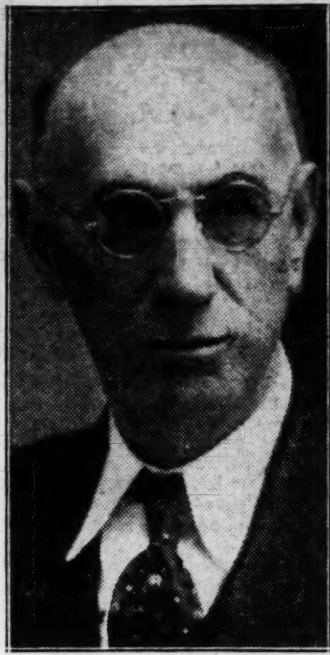

Both figures are after interest, depreciation, taxes, etc.

Increase Is Seen In Packard Earnings.

DETROIT, April 19.—(P) Stockholders of the Packard Motor Car Company re-elected directors at the annual meeting here today.

Alvan Macauley, president, told the meeting informally that earnings for the first quarter would be approximately double the earnings for the first quarter of 1936, which were $1,250,000.

Gwinnett City Court Opens in Lawrenceville

Judge Pemberton Cooley (left) and Hope D. Stark (right), yesterday assumed their respective duties as judge and solicitor general of the newly-created city court of Gwinnett county. Judge Cooley formerly was solicitor general of the Piedmont circuit. Both are members of the Lawrenceville bar.

GIRL ASSISTANT SAVES

TRAINER FROM LIONS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 19.—(UP) —"Chubby" Gilfoyle, noted animal trainer playing with the Royal American shows here, was saved by a girl assistant tonight after two lions in his act leaped on him.

Marjorie Kemp, the assistant, entered the cage through an escape door and drove off the lions with a steel prong. Gilfoyle was badly mauled by the lions before she came to his assistance.

He was taken to St. Luke's hospital where attaches said his condition is "fair." His left arm and throat were badly torn, physicians said.

SENATOR LEWIS HINTS FOREIGN DEBT ACCORD

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(P) —Senator Lewis, Democrat, Illinois, said today he was informed of "movements looking toward adjustment" of foreign debts to the United States—"something in the nature of a settlement."

He told the senate the state department had indicated this in asking his resolution relating to reciprocal trade pacts and foreign debts be referred to the foreign relations committee instead of to the finance committee where it is now pending.

The resolution would prohibit reciprocal trade pacts with defaulting debtor nations.

TEXTILE BLOC HITS RAYON WORK WEEK

Murchison and Gardner Carry Protest to White House.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(P) O. Max Gardner, counsel for the Cotton Textile Institute, told President Roosevelt today 24-hour daily operation of rayon weaving mills is a "positive menace" to the textile industry as a whole.

Gardner called on the President with Dr. Claudius T. Murchison, Institute president.

"Speaking for myself only, I stated to the President my faith in the soundness of the 40-hour operation week for textiles and urged with all possible emphasis the national necessity for condemnation of the 24-hour daily operation of productive machinery in rayon weaving," Gardner said.

"I told the President that the third (eight-hour) shift in rayon weaving was a positive menace to the industry and should be outlawed before its evil influences spread to other branches of the textile industry."

Gardner said the textile industry had agreed to operate two eight-hour shifts five days a week, the same as under the invalidated National Recovery Act.

'SHOT BY MISTAKE,' WOMAN IS DEAD

Murder Charge Lodged by Official Against Her Husband.

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., April 19.—(P)—Mrs. Sally Boggs died today from bullet wounds police said were inflicted by her husband, Allen D. Boggs, early Saturday when he assertedly mistook her 12-year-old son for "another man" in her bedroom.

District Attorney Benjamin Knight immediately announced he would bring a first-degree murder charge against Boggs, 53, an army officer during the World War.

Mrs. Boggs, who married Boggs in 1929 after a divorce from Dan Renear, former chief inspector of Nevada's state police, succumbed to wounds in her chest and abdomen.

The son, Danny Renear, saw his mother, for the first time since the shooting, a few hours before her death.

The slightly built, blond boy came from the hospital room fighting back tears.

"I spoke to her and kissed her," he said, "but I guess she didn't hear me. She didn't say anything."

Edward's Charm A News Buildup, Asserts Briton

Answer to the question of whether a king is a king without the coronation ceremony was answered last night by Dr. Frank O. Darvall, British writer and lecturer, when he declared that the coronation had no legal significance.

"Edward became king upon the death of his father," Dr. Darvall said, "and the absence of coronation ceremonies in no way affected his right to the throne."

"The order of ceremony is almost the same today as it was 820 years ago," Dr. Darvall said. He also explained that by law Mrs. Simpson would have automatically become queen had she married Edward while he was king, though she need not have been crowned at the coronation.

Dr. Darvall said the English people feel that it was Edward's fault he had to abdicate, since he was given every chance to continue on the throne.

"Men are forced to do their job many times without the woman they love," Dr. Darvall said, adding that it was difficult to sympathize with Edward since the excuse did not seem adequate.

"We are beginning to realize that Edward was not quite the Prince Charming built up in newspapers," he said, "nor the paragon of virtue, though there is a tendency to swing too far in the other direction and look only at the dark side."

Dr. Darvall spoke last night at the Glenn Memorial auditorium as the final presentation this season of the Emory University Student Lecture Association.

HOUSE BODY APPROVES WAR PROFIT MEASURE

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(P) The house military committee approved tentatively today strengthened legislation designed to take the profits out of war.

After days of disagreement the measure was ended with a drastic tightening of the tax section, the measure was qualified approval and went to subcommittee for completion.

Chairman Hill, Democrat, Alabama, said it would be reported to the house in a day or so. He declined to divulge the changes the committee made in the bill.

Bachelor Haven on Briarcliff Road Intrigues Interest of Visitors

By Sally Forth.

NESTLED in a wooded glen out on Briarcliff road is a quaint, stone house so delightfully cozy and perfect in every detail, that you feel you simply must have it for yourself. The rambling, artistically-planned dwelling belongs to Julian Barfield and Anthony de Vaughn, and the young men made the pencil sketches that resulted in their unusual home. Approached by a flower-lined pathway, the visitor descends stone steps onto a stone terrace enclosed by stone walls. A Dutch door made of pine and varnished to a glossy sheen, with hand-wrought black hinges and knocker opens into the long living room. Entranced, one stands upon the stone floor and takes in the atmosphere of a room which boasts a huge stone fireplace with a high mantle ornamented with a sword, and hand-painted china plates on either side. A large Jacobean table catches the eye, its central ornament being an enormous brass candlestick that Julian and Tony found in an antique shop. Benches flank either side of the table, and near this is the most charming window alcove. Made of pine, it has shelves at the sides holding exquisite pieces of glass and chinaware, and attractive potted plants bloom cheerfully on the window ledge. A grand piano occupies an important place in the room and a 200-year-old pine chest the young owners picked up on an old farm in south Georgia adds much to the charm of the artistic room.

The walls are paneled in pine, and a ledge extends around the room, on which are placed copper ornaments and old plates. Hanging from the vaulted, beamed ceiling is a valuable opalescent oblong lamp, another antique. A narrow flight of stairs plated with copper leads to an intriguing balcony, and instead of banisters, Julian and Tony constructed book shelves around one side of the stairs. Here an easel and drawing materials are put to use by Tony's talented fingers, and a studio couch is set at the other end.

There is little to remind one of the kitchen when you enter that vital part of every home. From an old-fashioned corner cupboard about 150 years old, one steps over to a modern electric refrigerator, and another piece of furniture is a quaint cherry table placed beneath a window.

The bedroom is really a lovely little sitting room, with its paneled walls, gleaming pine floors and comfortable studio couches. A Norwegian fireplace, which is built into the wall a few feet from the floor, has pine doors with hand-wrought hinges, and the side front Dutch door opens onto an irresistible open court. A cone well, with an old oaken bucket, is the most charming feature of the court, and in the center is a millstone. Patches of flowers lend their colorful beauty to the scene, and a table and benches are set for outdoor meals. The gleaming pine door leads to the garden outside and the other to the living room.

One finds so many unexpected nooks, rare bits of Wedgwood, early American glassware, fascinating pieces of furniture, and such an utterly home-like atmosphere, that this bachelor haven is extremely hard to describe with justice to its individuality.

ENGLISH nobility visited last week in Athens in the persons of Sir Robert and Lady Craigie, of London. Lady Craigie, the former Pleasant Stovall, of Savannah, and she and her titled husband formed the inspiration for numerous social affairs during their visit to Lady Craigie's aunt, Mrs. Billups Phinizy. Mrs. W. Lamkin and Mrs. Edgeworth Lamkin were hostesses at luncheon for the attractive visitor, and the Harvey Stovalls entertained at a dinner party in the couple's honor.

A 4 o'clock tea was given by Mrs. Thomas Tillman, and her little six-year-old daughter, Elior, was so excited over meeting the prominent English guests that she said to her mother, "I just can't wait to see the Lordy and Lady."

Lady Craigie wore such a dazzling array of diamonds that it never occurred to anyone that they were real, for good costume jewelry is so much in vogue now, imagine the amazement of Athens socialites to find they were all genuine stones, left to the former

Miss McKenney Weds Sidney Dykes

COLUMBUS, Ga., April 19.—Characterized by beauty was the marriage of Miss Natili Williams McKenney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kerns McKenney, and Sidney Hayes Dykes on Wednesday at 8 o'clock in the First Presbyterian church. Dr. Robert S. Boyd, pastor of the church, officiated in the presence of a large gathering, and Mrs. W. J. Burrus presented a program of nuptial music at the organ.

The interior of the church provided a striking setting for the wedding party. The all-white altar was outlined with feathery sprays of smilax and the pulpit was banked with white snapdragons, Easter lilies and white stock. Tall palms and ferns formed a background and cathedral candelabra outlined the three arches and extended into the choir loft.

Ushers were Prentiss Neal, Forman Dismukes, Charlton Williams and Richard Watkins, and the groomsmen were Paul McKenney Jr., brother of the bride; Oscar Tigner, of Atlanta, and Henry Barber Jr., of Moultrie; A. L. LeVelle, of Gainesville, Fla.; Fain Dykes, of Eufaula, and Clay Dykes, of Dalton, brothers of the bridegroom.

Miss Carolyn Norris and Mrs. Forman Dismukes were the maid and matron of honor, and the bridesmaids included Miss Louie Cargill, of Columbus; Mrs. Thomas Emmett Throver, of Chicago, who was before her marriage last week Miss Marjorie Patterson, of Columbus; Miss Erin Biggs and Mrs. O. C. Tigner, of Atlanta, and Mrs. A. L. LeVelle and Mrs. W. B. Stotesbury, sisters of the bridegroom, of Gainesville, Fla. They all wore frocks of aquamarine ribbed taffeta fashioned with full skirts and graceful trains.

The bride entered with her father, Paul Kerns McKenney, by whom she was given in marriage, and met the bridegroom and his brother, M. M. Dykes, of Columbus, who acted as best man. Her blond beauty was enhanced by her wedding gown of ivory satin, belonging to Mrs. Holcombe T. Greene, of Atlanta, close friend of the bride. It was form-fitting to the hips, where it extended to form a train, and featured a yoke of exquisite rose point lace. The long sleeves were buttoned from the elbow to the wrist with tiny satin-covered buttons.

The veil of illusion tulle was bordered with rose point its entire length, and extended from a cap of the same lace. A short face veil was caught to her hair with clusters of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and valley lilies. Her only ornament was a gold pin in key shape, an heirloom in her father's family, and her lace handkerchief was loaned to her by Mrs. Harry Lange Jr., of Atlanta.

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. McKenney entertained the wedding party and out-of-town guests at a reception at their home in Peacock Woods.

During the evening, Mr. Dykes and his bride left for a wedding trip to New York city. Mrs. Dykes traveled in a three-piece navy blue wool suit with a collar of silver fox. Her accessories were in matching shades of blue, and her flowers were a corsage of Parma violets. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Dykes will reside in Columbus.

Miss Smith, Fiance Feted at Supper Party.

Miss Jeanette Smith and her fiancé, John Merry, were central figures at the buffet supper given Sunday evening by Miss Margaret McCarty at her home on Woodcrest avenue. Assisting in entertaining were Mr. and Mrs. Rucker McCarty, parents of the hostess; Mrs. Morgan Lewis Smith, mother of the bride-elect; and Mrs. Roy G. Merry, mother of the groom-elect.

The table in the dining room was covered with a Venetian lace cloth and centered with a silver bowl filled with delphinium and yellow tulips. Silver candelabra holding white tapers completed the table decorations. Guests included 25 friends of the young couple.

ONCE again Atlantans will have an opportunity to give for "sweet charity" when they motor to the beautiful estate of Mrs. Durand Williams on Ridgewood drive for the "Bundle Tea" at which members of the Service Group entertain this afternoon.

The Service Group is that prominent and efficient group of Atlanta matrons who operate the Omnibus Shop and their tea this afternoon will afford the many Atlantans opportunity to bring bundles of clothing, house furnishings and the like, to be used in the furtherance of the splendid work they are doing. The attractive invitations issued for the affair present a cleverly drawn map showing the direct route to Mrs. Williams' home which, with its beauty of surroundings, will lend itself admirably for the occasion today between 4 and 6 o'clock.

Junior Red Cross Club Meets.

Junior and senior high schools sent Junior Red Cross Council officers to a meeting of Atlanta Junior Associates' Club held recently at the home of Mrs. Robert F. Cunningham, 420 Ponce de Leon. The program centered around the junior program and customs in the far east. Mrs. Cunningham told about her three years of teaching in the orient and furnishings and art panels from Japan, China and Korea. Japan has the second largest junior Red Cross enrollment and sends quantities of albums and gifts to the Atlanta chapter.

The annual birthday party for the life-size Japanese doll, Miss Magoya, was recently held at High museum in celebration of the date of arrival. The doll was sent to the children of Georgia from Nagoya, Japan, as a token of friendship. Fifteen schools sent representatives and Lewis Skidmore, museum director, explained the importance of art in the education of Japanese children. He also showed five theatrical masks which were sent to the museum from Japan. Patricia Cunningham, of Smilie school, told a legend of a Goddess. Frances Wheeler, council secretary, extended formal birthday greetings on behalf of the 115 schools enrolled in Junior Red Cross.

The following members were present: Bertha Worthen, Commercial High; Clara Ganner, Fulton High; Eleanor R. Wheeler Jr., director; Miriam Rouse, Murphy Junior High; Margaret Bryant and Janice Allen, Joe Brown Junior High; Mrs. H. M. Pittman, faculty sponsor; Joe Brown; Patricia Cunningham; Smilie; Sidney Pazol, Boys' High; June Moore, NAPS; Lenore McClure and Helen Nelson, O'Keefe Junior High.

New England Women.

The Atlanta Colony of the National Society of New England Women meets with Mrs. Richard G. Peeples, 1260 Fairview road, Tuesday at 10:30 o'clock to sew for the Needle Work Guild. After luncheon the colony meeting will take place with Mrs. Robert S. Fiske, president, presiding.

A series of bridge-luncheons for new members have been arranged. A recent hostess was Mrs. Lewis P. Skidmore for Mrs. Cornelius J. Sheehan and Mrs. Earl C. Myer, new members. Anyone interested in joining and attending the meeting call Mrs. Robert S. Fiske at Hemlock 3223-R.

My Day

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT.

WASHINGTON, Sunday.—On Friday afternoon we were joined for a brief time in our sight-seeing tour by Senator and Mrs. Byrnes and Senator and Mrs. Moore. We saw two very unique tombstones in St. Philip's churchyard in Charleston, one of which I had copied, so eventually you will get it in this column.

The other inscription amused me for two reasons. First, because it put just your initials on a tombstone strikes me as slightly arrogant. Second, the initials on this special tombstone, which I brought home to my husband. They read: "W. P. A. Passed Away in 1835." It seems, however, to be a very active corpse today!

We left at 8 o'clock Saturday morning and drove out of Charleston over the Cooper bridge, which is a very interesting bridge. Here occurred my first piece of careless driving. A very kind friend of Mrs. Huntington's had driven out there to meet us with some maps for the rest of our trip and as we were talking someone drove up behind us.

The friend told me to pull out to the right-hand side. Without stopping to look if there was anything in the way, I pulled the car over only to find myself colliding with a low cement division which was intended to keep the cars apart. The car got quite a jar, but no harm was done to the cement or my tires. However, my feelings as a driver were very much injured. It is always worse to know the fault is all yours!

The rest of the day was uneventful. We stopped under a most gorgeous tree to drink our coffee and to eat some of the Charleston specialties which had been showered upon us. I think the benne cookies are very good, but the superstition which is attached to the growing of benne worries me somewhat. They say the negroes believe that if you ever let it die out the well-being which comes with it will also go. The meaning of the word is, of course, "well-being." Apparently there are no uses for benne except as a food for the wild birds, and for the making of cookies and candy.

We reached Richmond, Va., at 6:15, spent a quiet evening and then started off this morning for Washington. The roads were clear for the first part of the trip, but became more and more crowded as we neared the city. Once in Washington, the traffic was quite terrible.

I don't wonder, however, for the day is glorious. Warmer than any day we had in Charleston and I should think everyone would want to be out of doors. I never return to this city, especially when I come in along the Potomac highway, that I do not think how really beautiful it is and how the Washington monument always seems to have a different color from the last time I saw it.

Press Breakfast Will Be Given At Atlanta Woman's Club April 21

The Atlanta Woman's Club, with Mrs. W. F. Melton as president, sponsors a breakfast in the banquet hall in honor of the press on Wednesday at 12 o'clock. Representatives from the newspapers and other distinguished people have been invited.

Mrs. Odie Clay Poundstone, chairman of parties and official teas, will be in charge of arrangements, and Mrs. W. G. McRea, chairman, and Mrs. Claude McGinnis, co-chairman of decorations, will have charge of the decorations.

Garnett T. Otter will render vocal solos, accompanied by Mr. Middleton. Invitation is extended to everyone to attend. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Odie Clay Poundstone, at Hemlock 4636, or the club, at Hemlock 4636.

The time of the program meeting of the club on April 26 has been changed from 3 o'clock to 4 o'clock in order that members of the club may participate in the national Memorial Day exercises. Dr. W. F. Melton, noted educator and president of the Writers' Club, will be guest speaker. Invitation is extended to organizations to which Dr. Melton is affiliated and to members of the club and their friends to attend.

Garden division of the club meets in the palm room this morning at 10:30 o'clock with Mrs. W. R. Leach, the chairman, presiding. She will give an interesting account of her recent trip to Havana. Cuba. A tree will be planted on the club grounds by the division in honor of Mrs. Leach, who has done outstanding work during the year.

THE EASY-TO-MAKE SPORTS FROCK FOR SUMMER WEAR

Although it's good all the year around, the sports frock has particular appeal during the long hot summer months when comfortable clothes become so necessary. Today's model is of orthodox cut, with a suggestion of shirtwaister. There's a neat notched collar, and a buttoning all the way down the front so that shorts may be worn underneath. There's nothing to the sewing of it, but a lot of good in the wearing! For house and town wear both. Try shantung, linen, tie silk or seersucker.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1226-B is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements: 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 14 (32) requires just 2-1/2 yards 54-inch material.

Price of pattern 15 cents. Do not send stamps. Send 15 cents for the Barbara Bell spring and summer pattern book. Make yourself attractive, practical and becoming clothes, selecting designs from the Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Interesting and exclusive fashions for little children and the difficult junior age; slenderizing, well-cut patterns for the mature figure, afternoon dresses for the most particular young women and matrons and other patterns for special occasions are all to be found in the Barbara Bell pattern book.

"DEAD END," Sidney Kingsley's drama of youth in the tenement districts on the waterfront, with almost 80 successful weeks in New York to its credit, goes into its second summer. Left to right are Billy Halop, Elspeth Eric and Theodore Newton.

DRESSED FOR FIESTA—Perhaps the Golden Gate Bridge motif is a bit overdone here. . . But in case anyone should stop to look at the bridge model carried by Alice Huelt, and if they should bother to inquire—it's all part of the Golden Gate Bridge Fiesta May 27 to June 2 which will celebrate opening of the world's longest single suspension span—linking San Francisco with Marin county.

Miss Butters, Fiance Are Honor Guests

Miss Frances Butters and Wright Paulk, whose marriage will be solemnized at a brilliant ceremony this evening, were honor guests last evening at a buffet supper at which Mr. and Mrs. William K. Jenkins were hosts at the Piedmont Driving Club. The supper followed the wedding rehearsal and the guests included members of the bridal party and out-of-town guests here for the wedding.

The long buffet table was arranged at one side of the ballroom with graceful arrangements of early spring flowers gracing each end of the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins were assisted in entertaining by Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Butters, parents of the bride-elect, and Misses Ruthanna Butters and Sara Jenkins.

Miss Ranur Grant entertained on Sunday in compliment to Miss Butters and Mr. Paulk at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Spottwood Grant on Howell Mill road. Assisting the hostess were her parents and her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Simpson. The guests numbered 100 members of society's younger set.

HAT FIRM SECURES FIVE POINTS STORE

Ten-Year Lease Closed for Old 'Tom Pitts' Corner.

The new building at Five Points, on the site well-known as the "Tom Pitts corner," now almost completed, has been secured under a ten-year lease by the Wormser Hat Stores, Inc., of New York.

The hat concern will occupy the first floor of the two-story building, erected by the Olympic Investment Company, which also owns the buildings adjoining in the rear, which were erected when that property was purchased a year or more ago. The triangular corner was acquired later.

The lease is based on a percentage of sales with the aggregate rental estimated as between $125,000 and $150,000. A minimum rental, it is understood, of $100,000 is guaranteed.

The lessee, it is understood, will close the three stores now operated in the city and combine its operations in the one modern store at this point by about September 1. Frontage on Peachtree street is 36 feet, with a depth of 40 feet each on Edgewood avenue and Decatur street.

Negotiations were handled through E. A. Erwin, vice president of the Draper-Owens Company, realtors; L. H. Parris, of the Citizens and Southern National bank, and M. Glauber, president of the Wormser company.

Check Forging Charged To Young White Woman

An indictment will be sought today against Miss Bernice Carithers, young white woman, charging her with forging the names of wives of Atlanta lawyers to checks used to purchase clothing and obtain cash, it was learned yesterday.

Over a period of several weeks S. H. Gresham, private detective for local stores, has been tracing these checks and now says he has recovered most of the merchandise in her possession. A total of seven checks were, it is alleged, forged.

The names of Mrs. W. Paul Carpenter and Mrs. C. H. Calhoun were signed to the checks, Gresham said.

Funeral rites will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the End Methodist church, with the Rev. M. M. Maxwell officiating. Burial will be in Covington (Ga.) cemetery, under direction of A. Turner.

UNIVERSITY BUDGET TO BE FIXED TODAY

Board of Regents To Meet Here To Allot Funds to Institutions.

Regents of the state university system will meet here today to fix budgets for operation of institutions under their care for the 1937-1938 scholastic year.

Possibility of an increased appropriation for the colleges would mean salary increases for faculty members drew their official compensation from officials of the board. Salary reductions enforced several years ago have not been restored.

Aside from a $300,000 special building fund, the regents will receive $1,750,000 for general operating costs for the year beginning July 1. This represents an increase of approximately $500,000 over this year.

The education and finance committees of the board assembled yesterday to review data for presentation to the board as a basis for budget fixing. The education committee heard an appeal from an Augusta delegation for an annual $50,000 appropriation for the University hospital.

Operated by the city of Augusta, the hospital is used as teaching institution for the University of Georgia Medical College.

Dean G. Lombard Kelly, of the college, said after appearing before the committee action on the request was "only problematical." With Kelly were Ben E. Lester, business manager of the hospital, and W. Inman Curry, member of the hospital board of trustees.

Lester said annual operating costs of the hospital approximate $310,000, with city council appropriating $103,000.

The request for financial aid from the regents, he explained, was based on the fact that wards have to be maintained in order for medical students to receive training.

Definite action on the proposal is expected at today's board meeting.

BENJAMIN REYNOLDS IS KILLED IN CRASH

Car Collides With Milk Truck, Hurling Victim Into Street.

Benjamin Franklin Reynolds, 35, mechanic for the General Outdoor Advertising Company for 15 years, was fatally injured at about 6:30 o'clock yesterday morning when the automobile he was driving collided with a milk truck.

Candler road and Glenwood avenue, DeKalb county.

Reynolds, who lived on McCaskey road, was proceeding north on Candler road and the truck, driven by E. G. Barge, of 107 Stone street East Point, was proceeding south on Glenwood avenue.

The vehicles struck with great impact, and Reynolds was thrown from the car, his head striking the street. He died of a fracture of the skull shortly after being admitted to Emory University hospital.

A passenger in the car, E. Peters, of McAfee road, suffered cuts and bruises. He was dismissed following treatment at a hospital.

Reynolds is survived by his wife, a son, Benjamin Franklin Reynolds Jr.; his mother, Mrs. Lee Reynolds, of Redan; three brothers, E. R. Reynolds, of Decatur, F. B. Reynolds, of Albany, G. and E. D. Reynolds, of Redan, and a sister, Miss Mamie Reynolds, also of Redan.

Funeral rites will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the End Methodist church, with the Rev. M. M. Maxwell officiating. Burial will be in Covington (Ga.) cemetery, under direction of A. Turner.

Contract Bridge and Other Topics of Interest to Women

Friendly Counsel

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:
I am 29 years old and am wondering if I should marry a very fine man who loves me dearly. I enjoy being with him, get along with him perfectly. We have much in common but what worries me is that I do not feel the thrill at his footstep. Can one really love without this and can one love more as time goes on when one is married?

PUZZLED.
Answer: Yes, one can love without a thrill and one can love more as time goes on when one is married. Some women aren't capable of thrilling at a footstep but this doesn't mean that they aren't capable of loving. Thrills that send marriage off with the speed and flare of a skyrocket are short-lived and they don't necessarily make a happy marriage. Congenial friendship is a better buy for the long pull of matrimony.

With all its mystery and magic, love is very simple. The affection we feel for a friend or member of the family or a male is in final analysis much the same. The one you love comes into your mind and heart and takes possession with you. Your first impulse is to be with that person in the flesh. If you have the same tastes, enjoy talking about the same subjects, doing the same things, the companionship is much pleasanter than if you have little in common.

All the more is this true of the closest of all relationships, that of husband and wife. Day and night, night and day they are together. It isn't with them as with the couple of friends who see one another semi-occasionally, each going his or her own way in the meantime. The man and his wife have to go the same way. Their life together is 90 per cent more satisfactory if they have a common viewpoint and common tastes. Take a man who despises social life and marry him to a wife who wants to give or go to a party every night. One of them has got to give in or there is eternal struggle that will wear them out and make them irritable and irascible with each other. Take a girl who knows nothing about running a home and doesn't care to learn, marry her to a man who has a mania for comfort and order. Either she's got to turn in and master the hateful art or he will criticize her, complain of her, quarrel with her, world without end.

So here's the answer to the questions of many maids who hesitate on the brink of marriage because the sharp thrills are lacking. A man's character determines what sort of husband he will make, not the quantity or the quality of his physical attraction. (Of course if a girl finds a man physically repulsive, she's a fool to consider marrying him since marriage can only make matters worse in that regard). It is congeniality between a pair that gives body to their love. The thrills only light it and electrify it for a few years. It is friendship founded on congeniality that makes their marriage a real union, loving, lasting, indestructible. "How can two walk together except they be agreed?"

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:
My husband loathes to dance. I love it. He tells me to go on with friends and he will play billiards until I telephone him that I am back home. We stage an argument over this at least four times a month and I usually end by going to bed in tears. We have decided to let you settle the question for us. What have you to say? S. AND G.

Answer: If your husband were a good sport he would go with you occasionally and if you were a good sport you would make your requests few and far between. But if he happens to be such a poor sport that he won't punish himself for your pleasure, then you had better control your passion for dancing and cultivate some other interest that he can enjoy with you. It is just such little disagreements that separate a married pair and send each of them out to find congenial companionship. Beware!

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

A SILENT ARGUMENT.
Today I resented an insult to my sensitive nature by expelling it from my thoughts. I'm grieved in my spirit, for there was a time when any obviously unkind remark meant for me, came to my unprepared ears—I let the words slide down inside me, most burning me up. Not being of the volcano type with the satisfactory convulsive outburst. I've just smoldered the blaze leaving a few, not quite dead ashes, very easy to start a fire again—but today, I have the satisfaction of knowing that, someone was ignored who craved an argument and my in-

Your Figure, Madam

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

REDUCE WITHOUT A WRINKLE
The beauty rate of reducing is one-half to two pounds per week. There are two things that will keep you from trying to reduce too fast—wrinkles, and the threat of a rapid return of weight.

You cannot afford to go recklessly about losing even a small amount of weight—much less an excessive amount! The hasty, undirected loss of a mere 10 pounds of excess may detract from health and appearance and leave you feeling and looking worn. Loss of 20 pounds overweight at a clip may dangerously deplete your vitality—and even a 100-pound reduction at the continuous steady rate of two pounds per week may be worth your life. It's better to keep your overweight!

It is perfectly safe to lose two pounds per week—on a balanced diet, of course—for a period as long as three months. This would give you a weight loss of about 25 pounds. At the end of that time, however, the rate of loss must be cut to one pound, or less, per week.

More than likely, your rate of loss will adjust itself. As you reach the solid fat which you have been carrying for years, the diet of two-thirds your daily calorie requirement will no longer effect a two-pound-per-week loss.

In order to continue this rate, the daily calorie intake would have to be cut below the safety level—and that means taking chances with your health and appearance.

With all its mystery and magic, love is very simple. The affection we feel for a friend or member of the family or a male is in final analysis much the same. The one you love comes into your mind and heart and takes possession with you. Your first impulse is to be with that person in the flesh. If you have the same tastes, enjoy talking about the same subjects, doing the same things, the companionship is much pleasanter than if you have little in common.

Now, as to method of weight reduction. If you are no more than 10 pounds overweight, exercise to reduce and get a lovely figure. While you must avoid overindulgence in high-calorie foods, a rigorous diet is not only unnecessary but is certain to reduce you in the wrong places.

But with more than 10 pounds overweight, diet becomes the principal part of the figure program and exercise is secondary. You cannot lose any great amount of overweight unless you take a calorie cut.

Summing it up, with 40 pounds overweight your progress can be about like this:
On the spring reducing program, you can lose six to 10 pounds during April; four to eight pounds in May; four to six pounds in June—making a total of 24 pounds lost during this first three months.

This should be your maximum loss, by the way. During the summer months you can lose 12 more pounds, averaging one pound per week. From that time on, your progress will be very slow—but let us hope—steady. Be content to average one-fourth to one-half pound a week for the remainder of the year.

The length of time and the amount you have been overweight have an effect on the elasticity of the skin. And skin contraction is an important beauty factor in your reducing rate. The longer you have carried the excess, the longer time you must allow for skin contraction.

Don't be discouraged with the apparent slowness of your weight loss. Every reducing program is difference spelled defeat—I learned the most always—conqueror—I learned that no words are as good as a silent blow—that is.

ENGLAND'S KINGS

When the Danes forced Alfred to hide in Somersetshire, he dressed himself as a minstrel, took his harp into the enemy's camp and learned their plans.

The Danes were driven out of Wessex at last when Alfred built England's first navy, which beat a Danish fleet off Swanage (Dorset).

THE VOGUE FOR STRIPES.
Decorators are all wound up in stripes this spring. It seems, my dears, that stripes are absolutely it! We will leave the more elaborate uses of these stripes to the hoity-toits and talk about stripes in a nursery. Stripes make us think of dunes, of cobras and tents, we guess, and knowing that children love a circus, this seemed a particularly bright idea for decorating a nursery.

A circus motif for decorating a child's room.

The problem Helen faced was to create a romantic, colorful room for her little boy in a rented house without too much out-of-pocket money. Papering the entire room seemed too much in as much as renting isn't permanent enough to warrant the expenditure. So Helen papered only the ceiling in wide, red and white stripes, curving the paper about eight inches down on the walls of room and scalloping the edges, a stripe to a scallop, to give the effect of a colorful circus "big top." Papering only the ceiling, the job was quickly and economically accomplished by Helen and her husband.

HEALTH TALKS
By DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

WHAT EVERY ONE SHOULD KNOW ABOUT SYPHILIS.
Article No. 2.

Last year New York state health authorities announced that the health department would no longer accept reports of laboratory tests (Wassermann, etc.) as case reports of syphilis. The health department recognized that positive Wassermann test or other laboratory or blood test is not in itself a diagnosis of syphilis.

As in other sections, New York state strives to take official notice of every case of syphilis. Syphilis is a reportable disease, like typhoid fever or tuberculosis. If the physician does not wish to reveal the patient's name, he must report only the initials and date of birth. This report is made, not to the local health department, but to the district state health officer, as a safeguard for the confidential nature of such records. Of course, the purpose of all this is the control and prevention of syphilis.

Open discussion and recognition of tuberculosis was the most powerful weapon in the campaign against the "great white plague." If syphilis is no longer a plague, it is steadily losing ground because of the advance of popular education. Syphilis is likewise a preventable disease, curable when intelligently treated from the beginning. But it is not enough, in the effort to stamp out and rid humanity of this curse, for those who have syphilis to know about it; it is necessary also that those who are not victims of the disease should know about it.

The morals of a patient are of no special concern to the physician. Religious or spiritual advisers or instructors and the patient's relatives, friends, or those who depend on or are dependent on him may look after his morals or be concerned about them. The medical adviser's proper interest is confined to the patient's physical well being, whether the patient be an angel or a devil.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON.

MR. HANFSTAENGEL.
Mr. Ernest Hanfstaengel, popularly—or at least generally—known as "Putzi," is no longer, we are told, musician extraordinary to his harassed Fuehrer, no longer liaison officer between the great Hitler and the English-speaking world via the press. The long and melancholy figure has arrived in London, accompanied by his son, it seems it is suggested that he go to Spain. But Mr. Hanfstaengel thought better of it. Spain and the whole mission appeared rather fishy. Why the mission anyhow, and why Spain?

Also his fiftieth birthday had come and gone with no telegram of congratulation to "Dear Putzi" from the reichspresident and Fuehrer. The omission was ominous. By such small indications yesterday's idols know that the royal thumbs have been turned down. In Germany turned down thumbs sometimes mean more than coyness. Mr. Hanfstaengel, perhaps, thought of other gentlemen who at one time or another had been the intimates of his chief. Of the blustering Roehm, the scholarly Strasser, the feminine and pretty Ernst, all very much dead today, with bullets, lots of bullets in their bodies. "Tsk tsk tsk," one can hear Putzi saying, wagging his heavy head gravely. "Tsk tsk." So he didn't go to Spain. Instead he stepped across the border, there, near Munich, where several borders are handily about, and went to England. Thus a career in the service of dictatorship, and the heroic principle, against the flabbiness of liberal democracy, seeks its final refuge under the tolerant protection of the softies.

Mr. Hanfstaengel has long been one of my favorite characters. My Berlin friends tell me that I have enjoyed a peculiarly vivid place in Mr. Hanfstaengel's emotions, ever since the day back in 1931 when he introduced me to the Fuehrer, who was then just Mr. Hitler. He had written to Putzi for the interview, for if one spoke English one approached the chief through the musician. "Madam," he replied gallantly, "Mr. Hitler will see you. You have a very nice handwriting." Perhaps Mr. Hanfstaengel was given to the study of graphology, a science highly considered in Germany, and thought that he discerned in my script both tenderness and sympathy. How great was his disillusionment; how false was I to my revealed nature! How perverse of me and how unwomanly! I did not like Mr. Hitler. And the Fuehrer did not like the interview. "The Thompson," Putzi would say, his eyes blanking with wrath, his mane of lank, dark hair falling into his eyes. "That woman! She nearly cost me my job!"

I suspect that Putzi's hatred of "the woman" operated to benefit some of my colleagues. One of them recalls how Putzi loomed upon him in the Unter den Linden, spying him from a distance, and shaking at him a long and agitated finger. "What do you write about my country?" he wailed. "Why do you see things with so jaundiced an eye?" But suddenly, his ire melted. Still, "But you are better than the Thompson!"

Dawn broke for Putzi in 1934. The impertinent woman had returned. And through the direct intervention of Putzi the Gestapo laid upon my desk in the Hotel Adlon the order, stamped and sealed, to leave Germany within 24 hours. Putzi had had the last word. Or had he? Well, Mr. Hanfstaengel, I left Germany, openly, by train. How about you?

Almon Williams Blanks Senators in Major League Debut

BREAK O'DAY!
By Ralph McGill

In the summer of 1932 a 14-year-old kid was watching amateur fights at Lakewood park under the promotion of Jay Thomas.

Before the evening was done he had been weighed in and fixed a match with a boy who accompanied him to the park.

Today, five years later, the kid of 1914 weighs 163 pounds on his pelt and is one of the two best middleweights in the fight game.

He fought his first professional fight in 1934, knocking out Barney Mulky in the first round. Since then he has gone along through 57 fights, losing just a couple of them.

He dropped one to Ken Verlin, the judges tying and a come-town referee casting the decision for Overlin. Fighting with a broken hand he lost to Tommy Beck at Washington.

Brown is an Atlanta boy and is back home for a stay during which time he will have his tonsils removed. This, he believes, will send him into the heavyweight class within two years.

Sam Sobel, known here and there as "The Mumbler," is his manager. Sobel, after handling a few boys who had little promise, seems to have a real champion prospect in Brown. He is called "The Mumbler," because he mumbles. He tries to talk through a cigar. And has very little success.

Georgia has had just one ring champion. That was the Tiger Flowers. The Tiger was a middleweight. He took the title from Harry Greb in 1926, holding it but a few months.

Boxing would come back in the south with a southern champion. Brown's handling has been good to date. There has been no effort to make a lot of money off him in the shortest possible time. They are bringing him along carefully and slowly, gathering experience as they go. The boy should be about right to do something in the middleweight ranks within a year. And within two he should be fighting as a light-heavyweight.

Brown began, as do most amateurs, as a puncher. He has developed a good left hand and is an expert jabber. And still retains that punch.

JAY THOMAS, PROMOTER.

Jay Thomas, who now promotes in Richmond, had a varied career. He was a boxer with a circus for several seasons; then handled the Stribling publicity for a decade, and later did publicity and promotion work with walkathons in Florida.

Thomas was a story-teller of rare worth. His expose of the circus "racket" in which the circus boxer met all comers as a riot.

"The handlers of the country boy who accepted the offer to fight the circus boxer, always confided in the boy they hoped he'd knock out the circus employe and get his job," said Thomas.

"Then they'd send him out there. If he went well the bell would ring before the three minutes were up. In the corner they'd shut off the boy's wind by rubbing his neck. They'd give him too much water and just before the going would drop a little lemon juice in one eye. Maybe they'd trip him if he was really tough."

"And," said Thomas, "if the boy didn't do so well, they'd stretch out the time of the round and let him take a beating."

Thomas interpolated his stories with gestures and faces. As one of my rich memories I retain the memory of the face he made to illustrate how the poor country boy looked sitting on the stool in his corner between rounds trying to breathe and wipe the lemon juice out of his eyes.

No one ever beat the circus champion. But it was a very

PHILLIES SHADE BEE NINE TWICE AS RACE STARTS

Morning Game Ends 2-1; Afternoon Struggle Also Mound Duel, 1-0

BOSTON, April 19.—(P)—Although generally consigned to last place in the National league, the Phillies cleaned up both games of a holiday opening bill today by defeating the Bees, 2-1, in the forenoon contest and coming back to administer a 1-0 shutout in the afternoon. A crowd of 10,000 turned out for the morning game and 25,000 saw the second contest.

Wally Berger, slugging center fielder, fractured a finger during the afternoon's pregame practice and was forced to the sidelines.

ATLANTA TEAMS IN GOLF MEET

HIGH POINT, N. C., April 19.—(P)—The annual south Atlantic scholastic golf tournament, a one-day, 36-hole medal event, will be played here Saturday over the municipal course. The tourney has been held here the last three years.

The defending champion, John Marshall High school, of Richmond, Va., and four-man teams from Newport News, Va.; Chevy Chase, Md.; Columbia, S. C.; Durham, Winston-Salem, Raleigh, High Point and Burlington, N. C., and Tech High and Boys' High, of Atlanta, are entered.

Officials said further entries were expected.

HERMAN IS SOLD TO DETROIT CLUB

CINCINNATI, April 19.—(P)—Floyd "Babe" Herman, hard-hitting outfielder, passed today from the National league. The Cincinnati Reds announced his sale in a strictly cash deal to the Detroit Tigers of the American league. The amount involved was not disclosed.

Herman, who drew $14,000 two years ago, had declined to accept an offer of $5,000 for this season and the Reds' general manager, Warren C. Giles, declined to boost the offer.

Herman, a left hander, batted .279 last season.

Jacket Net Team Defeats Alabama

Georgia Tech's tennis team went back into the win column with a 6-to-0 victory over the University of Alabama team Monday afternoon on the Tech courts. The Jackets had a winning streak of 35 straight snapped Saturday at Florida.

In the singles, Boulware beat Goodes, 6-0, 8-10, 6-4; Moore beat McBurney, 6-0, 6-2, Silva beat Zajak, 6-3, 6-1 and Hill beat Moody, 6-1, 6-1.

In the doubles, Boulware and Moore beat Goodes and Zajak, 6-1, 6-4, and Lindsey and Swift beat McBurney and Moody, 6-3, 6-3.

Indians Sell Berger To Chisox Team

CLEVELAND, April 19.—(P)—The Cleveland Indians announced today the sale of Lou Berger, utility infielder, to the Chicago White Sox for cash. The Indians last week acquired Joe Kroner, also a utility infielder, from the Boston Red Sox.

GRANTED HEARING.

MIAMI, Fla., April 19.—(P)—The State Racing Commission today granted Bert S. Mitchell, prominent trainer, a hearing on charges of artificially stimulating horses for which he recently was ruled off the turf.

Al Williams, Ex-Cracker, Is Hero of Opening Day

Al Williams, last year with the Atlanta ball club, was the hero of the opening day at Washington yesterday. Going in as a relief pitcher with the bases loaded and two outs, he stopped the Senators and pitched great baseball to win in the tenth. He won 17 games for the Crackers last year. He is shown above in action with the Athletics.

Waxahatchie, Texas, Is on Map Once More

Ex-Cracker, Al Williams, Makes Good Before the President.

By RALPH MCGILL.

They put Al Williams on the air after the game in Washington yesterday.

"Can they hear this down in Waxahatchie, Texas?" he asked. "They sure can," said the announcer.

"Hello, no!" said Al Williams.

And no doubt the fans in Waxahatchie were listening. Because the ex-Cracker, who came up at the far end of the 1935 season and who won 17 games for Atlanta last season, was the outstanding hero of the opening day games yesterday.

He beat the Senators, with President Roosevelt looking on. And he nailed down his place as a regular with the Philadelphia Athletics.

Going in during the third inning with the bases full and one out, he stopped the Senators without another run. From then on, he pitched no-run baseball. He walked six men and struck out four and allowed four hits through the tenth inning in which inning the Athletics scored the winning run.

"How did you feel when Simmons was up there?" he was asked. "I was a little nervous until I saw him miss that strike."

22-YEARS OLD.

Williams is a big tall boy, 22 years old and has a good fast ball. He lacks control, but when going good he can beat any ball club.

He was recommended to the Crackers by Paul Richards, also a native of Waxahatchie.

Atlanta fans got a great wallop out of his victory yesterday and members of the Cracker team, getting ready to depart for Knoxville, all were talking of his successful debut.

TOUGH SPOT.

He couldn't have picked a tougher spot than the one old Connie Mack selected for him. And he made good before a great crowd which included the President of the United States and 32,000 citizens.

He got himself a spot on a nationwide hookup and obtained more publicity in one afternoon than the average rookie pitcher gets in a full season.

If Bud Thomas comes through with a victory to add to Harry Kelley's record of last year, all major clubs will be looking over Atlanta's pitchers.

ROOKIE ALLOWS ONLY FOUR HITS IN 7 1-3 INNINGS

A's Win, 4-3; Phils Take Double-Header From Bees.

By DILLON GRAHAM.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(P)—Connie Mack, of Philadelphia, uncovered a freshman battery today which combined to defeat the Washington Senators in a ten-inning game which started the American league baseball season. The score was 4 to 3.

Even the presence of President Roosevelt, who had never seen Washington lose since he entered the White House, failed to offset the pitching wizardry of Rookie Almon Williams, and a timely hit by Catcher Earl Brucker, a 30-year-old newcomer to the Athletics.

A capacity crowd of approximately 32,000 fans, many in shirt sleeves and thin dresses, saw Joe Casarella, of the Senators, engage Williams, a 22-year-old right-hander from Atlanta, in a tight pitchers' battle.

Brucker broke up the game in the tenth when he stepped into a fast ball and smacked a double into center field to score Bob Johnson with the winning run.

Johnson had walked.

PRESIDENT CHEERED.

Mr. Roosevelt drew a big cheer from the fans when he drew into the park just before game time. After Vice President Garner had raised a flag in center field, the President greeted the rival managers, Mack and Harris, and performed his annual chore of pitching the first ball.

His toss was a high lob that Buddy Lewis, Washington's young third baseman, grabbed after a mad scramble with players of both teams.

Then the President settled down to enjoy the contest. He laughed and chatted with members of his party, including his son James. He grinned and waved at the crowd in the tenth when a foul ball landed in his box and narrowly missed him.

SMITH IS WILD.

The veteran Mack's first attempt to whip the Senators with a rookie pitcher, Edgar Smith, young southpaw from Williamsport, Pa., almost "walked" the A's out of the game. After Washington had scored a run on Stone's triple and Bluege's single in the second, they moved across two runs in the third, almost without lifting a bat. Smith issued four bases on balls and forced across two runs in that inning.

Then Connie Mack called in Rookie Williams. Despite a tendency toward wildness, Williams held the Washington sluggers to four hits during the seven and a third innings he worked.

The A's were never behind. They scored two runs in the second on Dean's single, Cissell's double and an error by Myer. Bob Johnson smashed a long home run to center field in the third.

Then Connie Mack called in Phila. Athletics 4, Senators 3.

DiMaggio Leaves New York Hospital

NEW YORK, April 19.—(P) Joe DiMaggio, star sophomore outfielder for the New York Yankees, was dismissed from the hospital today without his tonsils but not without a lot of life.

Rapidly improving, Der Mag said he would attend to tomorrow's Yankee opener against Washington if the weather was warm enough.

"Ought to get back in that lineup in a few days at the latest," DiMaggio believes removal of his tonsils will mean a quick cure for his ailing right arm.

They put Al Williams on the air after the game in Washington yesterday.

"Can they hear this down in Waxahatchie, Texas?" he asked. "They sure can," said the announcer.

TARZAN'S QUEST No. 104

"What will you do with me?" Jane asked. "I take you to Kavandavanda," said her captor in a touched tone. "He is Kavandavanda?" "He is Kavandavanda!" The man spoke as if that were sufficient explanation--as though one said, "God is God."

... Prince Sborov, too, was a captive--not of any physical thing, but of his conscience and his cowardice. His fear peopled the jungle with a thousand terrors, not the least of which was the haunting specter of Kitty Sborov, whose blood he had shed.

He stumbled on, hungry and thirsty, hysterical with fright. His mind was tottering. He talked to himself, then cautioned himself to silence lest his voice attract some beast of prey. He glanced back. There was the thing he most feared--a stalking lion!

The beast advanced slowly. Those terrible, yellow-green eyes seemed to bore through Alexia. He voiced a piercing scream, and fled. The lion was hungry. He had not wished to kill--yet. But this attempt to escape made him angry. He charged!

STATE SANITARIUM

helter. A creek will go forward in the mail today.

The Photo Tip Editor was kept busy, extremely busy, last week with many tips. Atlantans are realizing how easy it is merely to pick up a phone and call the Tip Editor. If their tip is adjudged the winner, then they will be five dollars richer.

A few callers and readers are a bit confused as to the rules of the contest.

Here they are:

1. Should you see anything which is of interest to you and which you think would prove interesting to readers, just call Walnut 6566 and tell the Photo Tip Editor.

Simple enough, isn't it? Then why don't you, and you, and you, get into the swing of it and compete for the five-dollar weekly prize?

Things that are daily occurrences to you, but which have never been called to the public's attention, might be winners. Anything interesting is news and that's what the contest is about—news.

Don't hesitate to call Walnut 6565 and join the fun and maybe you too can be a winner. It costs nothing to try.

RADIO STAR RECOVERING.

LAKELAND, Fla., April 19.—(AP)—Mrs. Lula M. Langford, widow of Frances Langford, said today the screen and radio star is recovering from a major operation performed in Hollywood Friday.

Langford, who has been in the hospital, Director Lamar Naughton, of the State Department Public Welfare, yesterday revealed that H. Sid Jones, secretary at Milledgeville state sanitarium, had been dropped.

At the same time, Murdaugh announced the appointment of Mayor Ed Newmeyer, of Lithia, as business manager at the hospital, succeeding Homer Bivens, who was dismissed a week ago.

Newmeyer will report to Superintendent John W. Oden tomorrow. He said yesterday plans to continue to hold his office at Lithia for the time being, but intends to remain at Milledgeville except on week ends.

Murdaugh also announced the board of public welfare had elected Mrs. Lucile Turner Watson, of Athens, to be secretary of the department. Mrs. Watson, former director of girls' club work for the extension department of the University of Georgia, will give up her new duties today.

Murdaugh said no success had been reported by H. Sid Jones has been dropped.
